House to re enacted it.

Randall, of Pennsylvania, called attention to the curious spectacle presented by the Schate amendment which involved an expenditure of $4,000,000, but which had not one word of executive suggestion or approval to commend it. There was no estimate for the appropriation. It proval to commend it. There was no estimate for the appropriation. It emanated afrom the Senate—the body which had been contending for years against putting any general legislation in the appropriation bills. In voting upon this amendment he wanted every member to range himself on the side where he expected to stay to the end. [Applause on the Democratic side] Last year a Senate amendment, similar to the pending proposition, had been put through in the House by reason of absentesism, but he invoked every member to so record himself on this proposition now that he would not find it necessary to absent himself hereafter.

Blount, in closing the debat, said that last winter, under a threat of an extra session the House had concurred in the Senste amendment appropriating $400,000 for the foreign mail service. The Democratic administration came into power and put the ban of its condemnation upon the proposition. The policy of the alministration on this subject could not be mistaken, and when the United States Senste, in violation of its rule—in violation of the principle that general legislation should not be placed upon appropriation bills, sought to force this proposition upon the administration, there was an audacity and boldness exhibited that needed to be met with courage. The issue was plain and clear cut, and for issue was plain and dear cut, and for one he was willing, as a Democrat, to take the responsibility for his action. Burrow's amendment was rejected. 86 to 142, and Hewitt's was rejected, Amendments offered by Taylor, of Tennessee, and Dougherty, of Florida, were rejected without division. The Senate amendment was non-concurred in without division, and the committee rose and reported its action to the House.

The recommendations of the committee were agreed to without division with the exception of the foreign mail service amen iment, which was non-curred in by a vote of yeas 178.

The amendments will now be sent to the Senate, and then go to the conference committee.
