It is truly a startling declaration hat "lawlessness is in this age a na-ional disease," but the deplorable fact tares thoughtful men in the face. It is seen in the South in the commission of one form of crime, the very mention of which revolts and sickens the soul, and in the punishment of that crime by a violence which scorns the proof courts and the regular administion of justice—a process and an ad-istration which are too often slow, uffling and inadequate.
