SUPREME COURT DECISIONS.

Reported by Jos. L. Seawell. EAMES vs. ARMSTRONG, Appellant, -From Rowan, Affirmed.

In an action to recover the purchase price of land paid by plaintiff and dam-ages for breach of defendant's covenant that he was the owner of the land, defendant's motion to remove the cause to the county in which the land was situated, was properly refused.

REDD, Appellant, vs. COTTON MILLS. -From Rockingham. No error. The courts are slow to interpose by injunction in the management of business enterprises. The sounding of a whistle for the purpose of directing end regulating work at a factory is not a nuisance per se, but may be enjoined when there is sufficient evidence that it does constitute a bulsance. In the absence of such evidence, the courts will not interfere by injunction, but will leave the complainant to seek his remedy by an action
