

SOCIAL

Miss Anna Eliza Henderson has returned to her home in Dilworth after visiting her sister, Mrs. Jake Steinhilber, in Savannah, Ga.

The following extract taken from the program of a concert at Christlinton, S. C., taken from The News and Courier, of Charleston, will be read with interest by a large number of Charlotte people:

"Polonaise" by Florio Montrowald, rendered by Miss Gertrude Caplemann, a member of the musical faculty of Elizabeth College. This afforded genuine pleasure, and the young lady exhibited great skill as a performer on that instrument. She manifested admirable and delicate technique, with a thorough appreciation of light and shade. Her remarkably creditable execution of the forthright passages which characterized the opening of this polonaise afforded evidence of the high accomplishment as a pianist. She is a great credit to her college, and thanks are due to the committee for affording this exceptional treat.

Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Dotger have returned to the city after spending a fortnight in New York, Philadelphia and Washington.

The Record of Greenboro: "Miss Lottie Gray, of Charlotte is spending a few days here as the guest of Miss Grace Andrews, corner of West Market and South Mendenhall streets."

The thing to do is to go to the skating rink and crack the whip or pull the tail off of the frog and get in society.

Mr. Lloyd C. Withers and bride have returned to the city.

Mr. E. C. Anderson came down from Lincolnton, yesterday, to spend the day with his wife.

COUNTY SOCIAL

Mr. R. C. Brown, of Tarboro, who has been visiting at the home Mr. and Mrs. Parks Kirkpatrick, has returned to his home. Mr. Brown and little son will remain some time with friends and relatives.

Mrs. H. D. Kirkpatrick has gone to Duo West, her former home, to spend a few weeks with her parents.

The Clanton-McCathern marriage in Ebenezer church on last Wednesday evening was quite a pretty affair. The bride, a fair haired little lady of sixteen summers, was striking in white silk with tulle veil, carrying ferns and white carnations.

Mrs. Parks Kirkpatrick has been quite sick at her home in Sharon. Her friends will be glad to know that she is improving.

Mrs. J. M. Bigham has returned to her home in Huntersville after a short visit to her mother, Mrs. M. J. Griffith, at Griffith's.

A number of friends and neighbors spent a delightful evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Griffith, at Moore Station, on Tuesday last. Music and games made up the evening's entertainments.

BRIEFS

A Few Minor Happenings in and About the City.

The Charlotte Retail Merchants Association will meet in A. B. Justice's room over the Charlotte National Bank to-night at 8:30. Some important business will come up and a large attendance is desired.

Mr. George G. Glenn, proprietor of the Crown Bottling Works at Gastonia, spent Saturday in the city. He was returning from Concord where he is contemplating the erection in the near future of a large bottling establishment.

Miss Vernon Caldwell of Sharon, has given up the place as chief operator at the Providence central telephone office and will be succeeded by Miss Annie Steins of Sandy Ridge.

Dr. Brown Wallace will leave to-day for his new home in Florida.

Down Monday will be the Osman Stock Company, at popular prices to-night.

Dr. J. T. Hiatt of Fairground, Richmond county, will come to Charlotte to live. His expectations to arrive some time this week.

The wet spell still continues. Yesterday was a damp, disagreeable day. There is a saying in the country that four days of such weather generally come together. The time is most up.

Some of Charlotte's streets are almost as muddy as the dirt roads around Barton.

It has been some time since the city has had a big blind tiger sensation.

Mrs. Robert E. Dixon, is quite sick with pneumonia.

The derailing of a freight train on the Southern, near Harrisburg, last night, delayed traffic for several hours. The wreck was held at Concord for quite awhile.

Boxes purchased from the Southern Railway for the Zimmerman house, now being used for a station, and in the near future have it rolled back and placed in the Rose home on West Trade street. The house will face on Fourth street.

The Movement of a Number of People, Visitors and Others.

Mr. L. W. Haskell, of New York, vice-president and manager of the Southern Cotton Oil Company, arrived in the city to-day on business connected with the local plant of this well-known concern.

Mr. W. H. Harris, of Atlanta, is in the city.

A BREAK WAS TOO MUCH

A Backwoodsman and His Boy at the Lunch Counter—They Do Not Agree on the Order.

It was early in the morning. Only a few of Charlotte's population gathered in the streets. Half a dozen men sat at the lunch counter at the Gem, but these were sleepy-eyed, and ate their snacks in silence.

After awhile others began to come into the place. People of various ages and appearance. Among them was a long, lean, shaggy-headed and much bearded back woodsman of perhaps 50, one hand thrust deeply into the pocket of his trousers, which were of the blue jeans variety, and scarcely covered his ankles or his white jaw hides airlike in his worn and mud-fanned shoes. In the other hand he carried an old-fashioned and much-worn telescope. Following close behind him was a tall, dressed similarly, and to all appearances, the former's son.

They, too, took seats at the counter. A clerk approached and inquired after their wants. "What for you, sir?" he asked, addressing the elder.

"Gimme er hater sandwich an er cup uv coffee. What you wan', son?" "I wants er steak, pa."

"What's de matter wid you. Don't you know we gatter catch dat train? You ain't got no time to eat no steak."

A SUNDAY JUNKIE

Shannon's Chariot Called Out to Accommodate a Drunk Man, but the Fellow Was Too Polite—Said He Would Wait.

Yesterday was not an ideal day for a Sunday school picnic. The streets were filled with lumpy patrolmen. It is an overpowering temptation to the news-gatherer to ride, especially as it is free. It was 2:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and many people were on their way to Sunday school when the chariot rolled into North Tryon street and turned toward the Seaboard passenger station. Sergeant Pitts held the reins over the frisky blacks, and Matthew Yandle sat by his side. In the rear seats Officers Asbury and McCall faced each other, and cracked jokes.

"What's the trouble?" asked an Observer man as he left the sidewalk and climbed in the wagon.

"A drunk man!" was the reply. "We went up Tryon to the Carolina Central track, then, passing under the trestle out the Sugar Creek road to the main line of the Southern. Sergeant Pitts inquired along the way but was unable to get anything definite until we came to Frog Heaven, a boggy place to the east, and there some one had 'seen a man totin a jug early in the day.' At the point where a street from the Gingham Mill section entered the Sugar Creek turnpike, we tarried, so that the officers might take a look at Sant'ago, formerly known as Dulston. Not a soul was in sight in that suburb, not even the immortal Sue McClure, whose home is among the first in the settlement. A stranger came up while we waited, and whispered something into the sergeant's ear, immediately after which we cut the team to the right and went towards the Highland Park Mill. As we mounted the hill we saw a party of men standing about the railroad crossing. When the chariot approached nigh unto them one fellow, with swarthy, wrinkled face, said: 'Good evin' Sergeant Pitts! Is it me you're hunting?'

It was plain that the speaker had been drinking but he was not drunk. He felt the effects of the liquor but had not misbehaved. Some one had reported him.

"Say, Sergeant, if I am the man you are looking for you are welcome to me."

But the officers let the man go. He was abiding by the law so far as they could see.

On the way back we passed in full view of Bug Row, which lies to the right of the same street that we were on. The place was named many years ago and had harbored some interesting characters as well as lively critters. Turning down Davidson we passed Fossam Hollow, which runs through Col. Willie Phifer's farm, to the right.

After we crossed the railroad Officer McCall suggested that Matthew Yandle be interrogated about the neighborhood that lay beyond the hill, to the east, and skirted the creek bottoms.

"Matthew, this is your own community—what can you say for the settlement near the creek, which was formerly called 'Phifer's Row'?" asked John Asbury.

"That, sir, is Scuffletown. It is rightfully named for is you get down there a time like this you will have to scuff, get out, for the mud will hold to you."

That being satisfactory, it was agreed that Matthew had acquitted himself well.

Cody turned lay to the left of the road but lay quiet there, and some nappy and some towy, were thrust out of the windows to the bearers could see what the chariot was up to, but barring that Cody was apparently sober.

Far in the distance we could see Red Egypt, and there was nothing doing in that notorious resort.

That is Moccasin's Valley, the home of Paul Hannon, declared Officer McCall, as the wagon rolled up Ninth street. Col. Hannon was not in sight and the Valley seemed to be all right.

SHOT BY POLICEMAN.

A Construction Work Supervisor on the Southern Perhaps Fatally Wounded by Police Officer at Fort Mill.

A man by the name of Edwards, a supervisor of construction work on the Southern, was shot and perhaps fatally wounded at Fort Mill, S. C., yesterday afternoon, by the chief of police of that place. The story that came to Charlotte was that Edwards, of the track, near the station, and he refused to go, saying that he was a railroad man and had a right to another. Edwards drew a gun and shot twice at the policeman before the latter pulled his revolver and shot twice, the balls taking effect in the breast and the abdomen.

Edwards was brought here last night and placed in the Presbyterian Hospital, where he is in a very critical condition. It is said that he was drinking at the time of the shooting.

Methusala was all right, you bet. For a good old soul was he. They say he would be living yet. Had he taken Rocky Mountain Tea. R. H. Jordan & Co.

Looking One's Best

It is a duty that every woman owes to self to present the best possible appearance. It is not vanity; it is self-respect. Few women wish to be professional beauties, but most women like to be as attractive as possible. Beauty and attractiveness are not so much due to perfect regularity of form and features as to grace and vivacity of manner and a pure complexion. All of these are obtainable by any one. Grace and vivacity by one can cultivate. A clear complexion one can gain by using the proper helps. The first step is to get the system right. See that the digestive tract is in proper condition. The rest will be easy. We have many things that will help in caring for the face, and many others that will perfect the charm of luxurious hair, white teeth and attractive hands and nails.
