AMUSEMENTS

Charles Frederic Nirdlinger's com-"Spangles," or "The Wooden Horse" will be presented at the Academy Thursday, coming direct from its successful run at the Broad Street Theatre, Philadelphia. The story of this play oozes with comic merriment, It relates occurrences in the town of Spangles in the West, a hamlet which has enjoyed much prosperity, owing to he lax divorce laws. These laws, however, have been repealed, and dryrot has set in. A New York millionaire, has set in. A New York millionalre, a Mr. Auten, has provided Spangles with a public library. As Auten is worn out with perpetual theatre-going and midnight suppers, as well as other entertainments calculated to make weary the soul of man, he seeks repose in Spangles. He has an additional reason for his teaving New York with Sylvia and Marjorie, for the first of these delightful young ladies has fallen in love with an actor, one Courtney Kene by name. Courtney, however, was not to be folled. Learning from Sylvia the object point that her father had in view, follows in his wake. Spangles, however, did not prove an auburn fair and quiet village of the plains, for upon his arrival Mr. Auten, discovers the hamiet in the throes of a theatrical erruption. In order to purchase books for the town library, the amateur thespians have gotten up a presentation of the "Passionate Shepherd." Auten buys sil of the seats for the first night in order to avoid the horror of "first-night" faces, which have tormented his life in New York. Courtney Kane revolutionizes the village, and likewise the "Passionate Shepheri" and finally, after much in the way of comic diversion, carries off the heiress Sylvia. It is a very fine cast that has been provided for the presentation of the play including Van Renseller Wheeler, George W. Loslie, Harry Narwood, Georgie O'Ramey and Florence Randolph.

Menominee correspondence in the Milwaukee Sentinel.

The high price white pine and hardwood stumpage is commanding to-day but one man who still sends wood stumpage is commanding to-day throughout the northwestern timber growing States calls out some interesting figures showing a gradual and steady increase in prices during the last twenty years. In the lower peninsulg of Michigan in 1870, white pine lands soid readily at from $1.25 to $1.50 an acre for the choicest tracts located within easy hauling distance of naviand Saginaw rivers.

Experienced lumbermen say that tracts of pure white pine are hard to get nowadays at any price. Timber bought at $2.50 an acre ten years ago cannot be bought now for $20, and even the most optimistic lumberman in the early days would not have ventured a prediction of such an increase in value. The hardwood or mixed timbers considered as possessing little value a few years ago have since 1897 increased in value over 800 per cent. maple, birch, ash and even beech, are eagerly sought, and since the introduc-tion of ash, oak and maple in the man-

Practical Politics, Harper's Weekly.

Harper's Weekly.

A practical politician of the first water came to light in a small Indiana town not long ago. In this town there is an officer, designated as inspector of streets and roadways, who receives the magnificent salary of 1240 per year. As the opposing political parties are very nearly balanced in this town, there is keen opposition, so that when this office became vacant and the authorities ordered an election to fill it there was a lively campaign for this small plum, no other elections being near. The Democratic candidate was a rather shrewd old fellow by the name of Ezeklel Hicks, and it loosed as though he would be successful, as a neat little sum had been subscribed and furned over to him as a camp. In fund, To the astonishment of everybody, however, he was defeated.

"I can't account for it," one of the Democratic leaders.
