

THE SAFETY OF SECURITIES

AVOIDING FORGED CERTIFICATES
How Occasional Frauds Like the Section Imitations Are Perpetrated—The Mechanical Difficulties in the Way of Producing Bogus Engravings—All Reputable Certificates, However, Are Made by the Most Perfect of Paper Accounting For.

Correspondence of The Observer.
New York, Feb. 17.—The recent daring imitation of $4,300,000 worth of Norfolk & Western Railway stock certificates has caused a great sensation among bankers, brokerage houses and all others interested in transactions carried on by means of bonds, stock and other kinds of negotiable paper.

STOCK EXCHANGE EMPLOYED
The system he employs, this official says, to exhibit makes any such deception as the section case impossible. When a certificate is submitted, no payment or other action is taken upon it for twenty-four hours.

TELEPHONE SYSTEM
The telephone system, the director says, is successful in counteracting much exaggerated in the public mind.

THE FUTURE OF SECURITIES
The future of securities, the director says, is bright. The system he employs, this official says, to exhibit makes any such deception as the section case impossible.

STEELE PLATE COMPLICATED

The greatest difficulty about the forging of stock certificates, however, is the design work which borders the script or lettering. This is engraved upon the steel plate by means of cutters, and the machines called planers, which are operated only after years of training and the intricacy and delicacy of the designs which they turn out are such that no one but a specialist is able to imitate them successfully by hand, but even the camera fails to reproduce them with any degree of clearness sufficient to deceive one with the most superficial eye.

With all these precautions in the making and handling of paper securities, the risk of really dangerous imitations is zero, and the chances of counterfeiting are practically eliminated. It only remains to handle such securities to possess knowledge and experience sufficient to distinguish a genuine note or certificate from the easily detected imitations.

A CIVIL WAR STORY

A New York Drummer Relates a Yarn Little Out of the Ordinary.

New York Sun.
It was up in the northern part of Maine the other day, and heard a story which was a little out of the ordinary line of civil war stories I have read about," said a New York drummer, whose name is not recalled, at the time of a dinner at the town of New York, which indicated that the drummer had been a prominent man in his lifetime.

"A citizen said, in answer to my inquiry, that he had been a drummer in the Maine militia for several years before his death. The citizen added that his drum was much larger than it would have been some years ago.

"He had not been back long when he was killed. He was killed in a battle in the Maine militia. He was killed in a battle in the Maine militia. He was killed in a battle in the Maine militia.

WOMAN WRITES THEM $1.00 UP

Love Letters? Business letters? Letters of diplomacy requiring extreme astuteness and an unerring discrimination in the choice of words in order to allay anger or to divert suspicion? Letters of friendship? Letters of advertisement? Are you in doubt as to how many should be written? Do you find difficulty in expressing your thoughts on paper?

Mrs. Frey is a quiet, unassuming woman, on the sunny side of middle age, trim in dress, a golden locket the only bit of color about her, if one excepts the flaxen hair.

First, as to her choice of a profession. Left a widow with two young children about a year ago, Mrs. Frey determined on an occupation which would let her stay at home.

Some early training on newspaper and a trisk of composition which she had acquired when she was a girl, prompted her to attempt to do for the public what she thought she could do.

She scorns the imputation that her trade is with "foreigners." "Candidates," she says—Mrs. Frey is nothing if not candid—"when I first advertised not candidly, but so far I have only had one—a Swede. My patronage has been an eye opener to me.

People who, so far as externals are concerned, are absolutely irreproachable, are my patrons. Just look among your own acquaintances and think how many people you know who can write a good letter, one that pleases you, one that when you are out of town or separated by circumstances brings that person near to you in spirit.

I will be willing to wager that you don't know more than a half dozen of the most.

"My methods? They are simple enough, seemingly, but you would be perfectly amazed at the trouble I have in getting what I want from the persons who come here. No, not infrequently are good enough, but information.

"Naturally, when a man comes in and says he is in love with a young lady or has a regard for one or wishes ever the form of expression is, I say to do duty, when he reaches the age at which Grant was inaugurated.

"The woman, on the contrary, is very reserved at first. She wants to make you think she is the pursued.

"My charge for writing any kind of a love letter is one cent, and from that on, according to the length and nature of the letter, I have one woman, a regular customer, who is keeping up a correspondence with five men and of course I make special rates for those who write to me. I have one man, who writes to me, who writes to me, who writes to me.

"There is one great difference in the sexes when it comes to an experience like this. The man is usually willing to tell all about himself, just now he feels toward the woman, what he became attached to her, what he has said and what he has not said.

legal paper and no doubt was to be used for a wrong purpose. He absolutely refused even when he offered me $10.

Many times people come and try to get me to write threatening letters. I always refuse and always tell them that it is not my business, neither is it. I would like above all else to get within the sentimental lines, and judging from my success I guess the field is not worked out yet.

Frecks of Rich Cranks.
In Vienna there is living to-day Count K., a wealthy nobleman of Polish origin, who occupies a sumptuously furnished flat in the most fashionable part of the city.

When he wants his servants he summons them by bugle call, much to the annoyance of his neighbors. His favorite pastime is to hire a combi and, dressed like an ordinary driver, to drive his cumbersome vehicle wherever aristocratic equipages are thickest.

He spends a fortune every year on the coldest of clothes, yet in winter wears the only bit of color about her, if one excepts the flaxen hair.

It is but a short time since there died at Comers a fine old man who was noted for a very strange eccentricity. Although for years he had never been outside his grounds, he would proudly inform his visitors that he had that very day walked to certain villages in the neighborhood.

What he had actually did was this. Whenever he made up his mind to visit a distant village or town he made an estimate of the distance and covered it on foot on a carefully measured walking track on his grounds.

When he wished to call on his friends in the district he would not only do it by proxy, but would conduct a conversation for hours by sending a servant to and fro with questions and answers.

Not long ago, too, there lived near Hastings a gentleman whose eccentricities very naturally excited considerable attention. Punctually at five o'clock of noon each day he would appear in his front garden with a gayly colored turban on his head, his feet jeweled with richly embroidered and jeweled sandals and with coolie cloth around his waist.

There is at Cape Breton a worthy and much married gentleman who has just taken his eighth wife to his harem, and he has a good reason for it. He must be to greet a home-coming wife, for seven of his rooms, each painted in black and white and liberally garnished with skulls and crossbones, are dedicated to wives numbered from one to seven.

As the birthday of each of these departed spouses come around the by no means disconsolate husband entertains his friends at dinner in the room specially devoted to her memory and improves the occasion by telling anecdotes to illustrate her many virtues.

foot racer nor a bull fighter, or chaser, nor can it be said that he makes a specialty of being chased, nor that he ever met a horn that he would not take hold of and blow, yet Monday morning he was placed where horns didn't look good to him, and in taking the measure of the number of feet around a barn, he did not stop to measure the distance with a square, but stepped it off, and was not particular to make steps accurately, though he was careful to make the steps firm and long enough to keep ahead of a mad bull that was making toward him with a set of horns topped and tapered in the proper direction to have made bad tones, but the animal succeeded in making the blow against West's body that was intended. The cause of this chase was the result of West's intended kindness to a bull belonging to Charles Robinson. The animal had his head fastened in the gate and W. F. thought he would unfasten the brute. When West was within a few feet of the animal the brute made a lunge forward and broke the gate down and started for West, who made the escape as above described, with honors.

His Decision.

Harper's Weekly.
The following anecdote is told of a professor in a Western university. "One day, while walking with a friend in San Francisco, the professor and his companion became involved in an argument as to whether or not the handsome man of the two, not being able to arrive at a settlement of the question, they agreed, in a spirit of fun, to leave it to the decision of a Chinaman who was seen approaching them. The matter being laid before him, the Oriental then considered long and carefully; then he announced in a tone of finality: "Both are worse."

S.S.S. OUR RECORD

With medicines as with other things, the surest test of worth is the length of time they have the confidence of the people. The efficacy of S. S. S. has been thoroughly proven by experience, and so successful has it been that today it is the best known and most widely used blood remedy in the world. For diseases such as Rheumatism, Catarrh, Scrofula, Skin Diseases, Sores and Ulcers, Contagious Blood Poison, and other troubles due to an impure and poisoned condition of the blood, no remedy acts so promptly and thoroughly as does S. S. S., and thousands throughout the country, cured of such diseases, are daily recommending it to others similarly afflicted. ITS FORTY YEARS OF EXISTENCE HAVE BEEN FORTY YEARS OF CURES. S. S. S. is a blood purifier of the highest order, containing properties necessary to cure blood troubles of every character, and which make it the greatest of all tonics. It goes into the blood and drives out any and all impurities, and makes this stream of life strong and healthy, and when this is done disease cannot remain. Being made entirely from roots, herbs and barks, chosen for their healing, purifying and building-up properties, it does not injure any of the delicate organs or tissues of the body as do those medicines which contain Potash, Mercury, Arsenic or other harmful minerals, but cures safely as well as permanently. S. S. S. reaches deep-seated and inherited cases on which the ordinary Sarsaparillas and tonics have no effect. It is no experiment to use S. S. S.; it is a remedy with a record; it has proven its worth and ability by its forty years of cures. If you need a blood remedy begin the use of S. S. S.; write us about your case and let our physicians advise you and send book on the blood; no charge for either.
