Lafcadlo Hearn was indeed a strange man. We would prefer to believe that his association with Africans wherever it occurred was with the definite purpose disclosed by his residence in New Orleans. His gifts and accomplishments, however, were that whatever shortcomings such there were in his private life were in a degree overlooked. The Sup remarks: "That Hearn lived with the Cincinnati negress in an intimate domostic relation is casily imaginable, That he actually went through the form of a legal marrage his acquaint. ances will believe with difficulty. The idea that he did not do so is strengthened by the further statement that "if throughout his career in the United States he ever hald tribute to any convention whatsoever, the men who came nearest to knowing him have never heard of it "

Hearn's failure to find the original African music, or anything to indicate that there was such, seems to reverse the ideas of those who claim that the negro songs are the only distinctive American melodies.

The Richmond News Leader remarks that "the idea of Washington's becoming a great wholesale business center strikes a good many persons as a capital joke." The pun is to be deplored, but it serves to call attention to a fact. The movement to make Washington a wholesale pusiness centre should be abandoned. The seat government is no place for of the tradesmen. If Washington is to be turned into an ordinary industrial centre, Lincle Sam should move his head. quarters. His business should be sofficient for any ordinary city.

The Nashville American, in referring to the fact that the two aged Alabama Senators, Morgan, and Pettus are to be re-elected at a primary on August 27th and that at the same time two men to succeed them in case they should die, says "it is a case of seeking dead men's shoes before the weaters are dead." The proceeding bay be a practical one all right nough, but there is no denying that it has its grewsome features. The Atlanta Journal, a paper which has been very much interested in the Southern Cotton Association when It could turn its attention from the gubernatorial race, has a double-column editorial with blackface type asking Secretary Cheatham to resign. When it is remembered that the Secretary draws $5,000 a year as salary, to say nothing of what he may make by dealing mfutures, this is seen to be a serious request.
