NORTH CAROLINA AND THE FEDERAL CONSTITUTION.

"North Carolina was the last to enter the Union and the last to leave it" is the sentence which has become the conventional illustration of North Carolina conservatism.

North Carolina says Dr. Raper, had taken a vigorous part in the overthrow of British control. She had also taken a more or less active part in the establishment and maintenance of the new central government, the Confederation.

"To the North Carolinians the ratification of the new constitution, while it meant the benefits of an efficient central government, meant the destruction of their State's sovereignty and the restriction of their freedom of self-government.

Bound up as they were by instinct and education to extreme individualism, the people were afraid even of the phrase "We, the people" in the preamble, for it assumed a dangerous centralization of power.

The Federal courts would virtually override the courts of the State, and that the individual's right to be tried according to the laws of his own people and by a jury of his fellow men would be destroyed.

And it is true as Dr. Raper concludes his analysis by observing that the subsequent course of history has proven that, in nearly every case, the fears of the North Carolina farmers were well founded.

The action of the North Carolinians did indeed spring from the political principles they had fostered from their birth. They fought to wrest their liberty from the hands of the English King, and could not be expected to surrender it quietly to a new and outside government.

The President's address at the dedication of the thirteen million dollar Pennsylvania capitol contained no reference to extravagance in government administration.

SECURING ELASTICITY.

The report of the commission of the Chamber of Commerce of New York State, on the condition of the currency, published in yesterday's Observer, was of considerable interest. No one in touch with the financial life of the country will deny the existence of a glaring defect in our present financial system—the need of elasticity.

A COMMERCIAL LANGUAGE.

There has been a marked revival of interest of late in the new artificial language, Esperanto. It is intended to develop into a universal language for the use of all peoples.

The visit of Secretary Root to the South American republics was comparatively a quiet one. There was some newspaper comment when he embarked, but other matters have since monopolized public attention.

That often "things are not what they seem" was proven by the testimony of a Richmond negro street beggar in court that he frequently cleared $45 a week in his professional capacity as a solicitor of alms.

At eleven o'clock this morning at Newport News, the scene of so many similar ceremonies, the good cruiser "North Carolina" will be formally launched.

Hughes and Hearst have accepted the nominations. We had thought all along that the proffered honor, by the Democratic nominee in such a laudatory way, his formal acceptance reveals an anxious fear that he might refuse to bear the banner.

It seems that the gallant Sir Thomas Lipton's numerous trips across the sea are not to be entirely in vain.

DIXON TO HIS CRITICS.

To Richmond Andrew Patton of "The One Woman" says in his letter to the Observer, published in yesterday's Observer, was of considerable interest.

"Ladies and Gentlemen: I thank you for this evidence of your approval of my work. I am sorry I cannot please one of your editors who is not here to-night. I assure you I have no grudge against him. I've found in 20 years' experience in public life that my enemies are always my best friends and I've learned to love them.

"Seven years ago I found myself the pastor of the largest Protestant congregation in New York, in receipt of the largest salary of any minister in my denomination, but I faced two important facts: That I had no talents for the pastorate, and that I was only a platform speaker, and the most serious mistake of my life.

"I dramatized my novels and made a still larger success in the drama. I have no apologies to make for my work. The theatre is fast coming to be one of the mightiest forces for good in modern civilization.

"The Clansman" will be played as long as the negro and the white man face each other on a square mile of this earth's surface.

"The One Woman" treats them in the simple language of laughter and tears. The Socialists have threatened me for writing it. I thank them for the compliment and I am not alarmed. Again I thank you, ladies and gentlemen.

"The Clansman" will be played as long as the negro and the white man face each other on a square mile of this earth's surface.

Commissioners of District of Columbia Tell Protesting Ministers That They Cannot Prevent Presentation of Dixon's Play.

Washington, Oct. 5.—The district commissioners to-day informed a number of leading ministers of this city, representing all denominations, that they had no authority to interfere with the performance of Thomas Dixon's play, "The Clansman," despite the vigorous protest raised by the clergy against its appearance in this city.

Spartanburg, S. C., Oct. 5.—Mrs. W. B. Stone, sister of George Shaver, who is under a six-year sentence for perjury and for marrying a girl under the statutory age, is endeavoring to obtain a pardon for her brother.
