

M. CLAM PAYS A VISIT TO CONGRESS

THE FRENCH JOURNALIST GIVES HIS IMPRESSIONS OF OUR LAW-MAKING BODY.

BY SHELDON S. CLINE.

M. Clam, the renowned French journalist, having been sent to Washington just in time for the opening of Congress...

Washington, U. S., Dec. 8.—The great congress of America began its session today in that Capitol at Washington...

The Congress consists of two bodies, called the Senate and the House of Representatives. The Senate is composed of 96 members...

The House is composed of 535 Representatives, who must not be more than 35 years of age...

The scene at that Capitol during the opening of Congress is delightful. The President of the United States is there...

The Senate has for its president the Vice President of the United States, Mr. Fairbanks...

a large clear always poled in the corner of his mouth.

I said: "It is with pleasure, M. Clam, that I view the opening of the Congress."

His reply: "Go right in, M. Clam! The animals will begin to perform in a minute. Hear them how!"

By this time enormous crowds of the common people were voting in the corridors. Those police were turned to give orders for maintaining the peace.

The members gathered around the speaker of the House, who took his money from him by force. He was hustled out of the hall...

It was nearly noon. We hurried back to that Senate, arriving after a long walk. The galleries were crowded with people...

chatting and embracing new arrivals. Seated at his desk was a small, fragile millionaire, M. Platt of New York.

Two venerable Senators attracted my attention. They are MM. Pettus and Morgan, both aged millionaires...

While I was gazing at the Senators and taking note of the beautiful women in the galleries, a buzz of conversation...

After M. Fairbanks had called that Senate to order and the venerable speaker had invoked the divine blessing upon the first class, a recess was taken...

the people. From this room many seekers after office depart in disappointment and with heavy hearts.

I met also M. Dewey, who remembered having met me on those boulevards, after I had recalled the fact...

WHEN THE KAISER TRAVELS.

Work Hard and is Accompanied by Staff of Government Officials.

A large staff of government officials accompanies him. A high official from the foreign office attends the duties of the foreign minister...

For the very lively exchange of messages between the Kaiser and the Chancellor special arrangements are made by the imperial postal department...

When the Kaiser is out hunting a special messenger goes after him in case urgent messages must be delivered.

Added to this must be reckoned the hours when he is working alone, consisting of the reading of newspaper clippings, the active correspondence with his wife, from whom he receives a daily letter, and the correspondence with royalties or friends.
