THE SELWYN EQUAL TO ANY.

Mr. Alexander Lightfoot Talks of the Excellence of Charlotte's New Hotel—Rates Reasonable and Guests Limited.
Mr. Alexander Lightfoot, the new manager of the Selwyn Hotel, is enthusiastic over the prospects of the new hotel. "For the money invested," said he, "there is not a hotel in the country which is more desirably located, better built, more conveniently arranged, and more perfectly appointed. I have opened four hotels for Harvey & Wood, and the Selwyn is, all things considered, the most desirable. I have no fears for its success."
Mr. Lightfoot added that the hotel would certainly open the first of the month. The carpets are now being put down in the bedrooms and the furniture placed. Already arrangements have been made with 20 residents who desire to live or take their meals at the Selwyn. The limit for permanent guests is 50. The rates for board by the month will likely be $35 per month. No definite decision has yet been reached, but charges will doubtless be as above mentioned.

DAILY FASHION SERVICE

LADIES' JACKET.
In Norfolk style, with double-breasted vest, and Applied Plaisé over Side-Front.
Paris Pattern No. 1738.
All Seams Allowed.
A fitted jacket in Norfolk style with a double-breasted vest is among the smartest new models for early spring wear. It is here illustrated made of unique cloth with the vest of checked cloth in black and mauve. The fringes from the neck over the vest, which is slightly low in V shape at the neck and ends in a double-breasted fashion with button-holes and fancy metal buttons. Long seams to the shoulders in the front and back give beautiful lines. Over them are applied beautiful plaits, the seams and plaits being arranged as to give broad shoulder lines and a tapering waist. Each button is attached to the plaits, is finished in points at the ends under buttons at the front edge of the vest. A rolling collar with broad curved ends finishes the neck of the coat, but the vest is collarless. The sleeves are in regulation coat-sleeve style with rollback cuffs having flaring ends. A chic touch is given by a line of soutache braid along the ends of the collar and cuffs, and in a trowel at the corners and loops of the braid, in simulated button hole effect, finished off with buttons at the front edge of the front.
These jackets should be carefully tailored and smart touches could be given by individual sleeves and cuffs and buttons and the color and material in the vest.
The pattern is in six sizes—32 to 42 inches bust. For 32 bust the jacket needs 6 1/2 yards of 36 inches wide, of 3 1/2 yards of 36 inches wide, or 2 1/2 yards of 44 inches wide.
Price of pattern, 10 cents.
Simply give number of pattern you desire, or cut out illustration and mail it with 10 cents, in silver or stamps, to The Observer, Charlotte, N. C. Fashion Dept.

INTERCHANGEABLE MILEAGE.

Reported That All Southern Roads Will Issue Mileage Books Good Anywhere—A Clipping From The New York Commercial.
For years past, effort has been made to secure interchangeable mileage books, good on the Southern, Seaboard, Atlantic Coast Line and every other road in the South. Books which had good on several lines, but no agreement has yet been reached about the issuance of books for all.
The following from The New York Commercial, of the 16th instant will be of interest to our readers:
"Early official announcement is expected of the sale of 1,000 and 2,000 interchangeable mileage tickets at 2 1/2 cents a mile, that will be good on every railroad in the entire Southeast. The arrangement for these is said to be a voluntary one upon the part of Southern lines. It will gratify every member of the Travelers' Protective Association, as well as the houses they represent, because it is something that has long been sought without heretofore making much of an impression upon the railroads in its favor. These books will be good for mileage over any railroad between the New Orleans, Memphis, Evansville, Cincinnati and Washington gateways.
"it is understood that merchants generally, tourists and pleasure seekers, will be able to avail themselves of the advantages of these mileage tickets."

WILL PROSECUTE CHEATHAM.

Two Warrants Are Sworn Out for the Agent Who Is Said to Have Enticed a Score of Mechanics from Charlotte to Chattanooga, Tenn.—The Case in Hands of Solicitor Clarkson.
Two Charlotte men have sworn out warrants against James Cheatham, the man who is said to have enticed and bullied a score of more mechanics from this city to Chattanooga, Tenn. The warrants were placed in the hands of Solicitor Heriot Clarkson, who, yesterday, made out the necessary papers to secure the return of Cheatham to this State. The papers were sent to Governor Glenn, who will attach his signature and forward them to the Governor of Tennessee.
One warrant was sworn out by Mr. W. D. McCorkle, father of Ben McCorkle, a youth who was among the number that went to Chattanooga, charging Cheatham with violating a statute by enticing a minor from the State without permission of his parents. The other warrant, sworn out by Luther Donaldson, one of the alleged victims, charges Cheatham with acting as an emigration agent in North Carolina without license in violation of a statute.
The case is now in the hands of Solicitor Clarkson, who will use every endeavor to have Cheatham brought to justice if he has violated the law.

MR. J. B. ALEXANDER SELLS OUT.

Mr. R. H. Jordan and Associates Purchase Book of Retiring Member of the Firm—Mr. Alexander's New Work.
Mr. R. H. Jordan yesterday purchased from Mr. John B. Alexander, his stock in the drug firm of R. H. Jordan & Company. Mr. Alexander retires to accept the position of manager of the real estate department of the Southern Real Estate, Loan & Trust Company, the office recently held by Mr. J. E. Murphy. Besides being manager of the real estate department, Mr. Alexander is also a director in the company, being one of its large stockholders.
Mr. Jordan will have associated with him in the drug business, Messrs. G. W. Campbell, D. A. McLaughlin and Charles B. Kidd, three of the best known young druggists in the city. R. H. Jordan & Company is one of the oldest and most prominent drug firms in the State. Its past has been a most successful one. The prospects for the future are even brighter.
COUNTY ASSESSOR WELAID.
J. W. Coulter, of Leslie, S. D., Assessor of Stanley county, relates the following: "I was waylaid by a couple of thugs and lost my trousers, bronchitis asthma and a terrible cough, which affected me for years, when I discovered the use of Dr. King's Discovery. Relief came almost immediately, and in a short time permanent cure resulted. No other medicine compares with it as a sure and quick cure for coughs and colds. It cures after all other remedies have failed. Every bottle guaranteed at all drug stores. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free."

After the ceremony the bridal party passed slowly down the aisle to the strains of Schubert's "Serenade," sweetly rendered by Miss Rosa Reid, a cousin of the bride.
The attendants accompanied the party as far as Cameron, where the happy couple took the southbound train for an extended trip through the South.
The bride is a daughter of Major and Mrs. Thomas H. Harrington and is one of Carthage's most popular young ladies.
The groom is head prescription clerk in F. S. Duffy's drug store of Newbern.

Amusements

"FAUST."
January 21—Robert Edson in "Strongheart."
January 22—Lillian Russell in "The Butterfly."
January 23—"The Free Lance."
January 24—"Our New Minister."
January 25—"Checkers."
The production of "Faust," Goethe's great German master work, which is to be given in the Academy to-morrow night by Mr. Hubert Labadie and a strong cast of well-known players, promises to be of exceeding interest. The same scenic and electrical effects will be used which the late Mr. Lewis Morrison, originated and made famous.
"STRONGHEART."
Robert Edson, whose success in his latest vehicle, "Strongheart," for the past two seasons has been acclaimed one of the greatest on the American Stage makes his visit here next Monday and his appearance will be one of the very best of the season. Mr. Edson in this play, which is one of American college life, by William C. DeMille, in which this popular star has added very materially to his credit as an actor, and to the lucrativeness of the play, which has amounted to a very large fortune since the premier of the play something over two years ago.
Mr. Edson, who has since his advance to stellar roles, been identified with plays of an American character, has this time selected a type never before utilized for stage purposes—that of an educated Indian, who, under the influences of close contact with civilization, has desired to marry the woman not of his race and while he has figured largely in the news of the day, up to the present time the stage has not pictured it.
Mr. DeMille has been fortunate in the choice of his leading characters and in the selection of the background against which to relate his story. Columbia University is the locale and his scenes picture events on and during the big football game of last season. His leading character, "Strongheart," is a full-blooded Indian, the son of a mighty chief. His tribe, appreciating the value of the white man's civilization, sends him to Carlisle and later to Columbia University. His leading character, a leader in their sports and a general favorite. On the eve of the great football game, an act of treachery fastens upon the Indian. The "prejudice of the centuries," then aroused, becomes bitter and vindictive, even when Strongheart proves his innocence, for he then reveals himself as a sutor for the hand of the sister of his chum. Strongheart has become as one of them—speaks their tongue, thinks their thoughts, is governed by their ideals, their laws, their fate. What more natural than that he should choose his wife from among them? But the white man will not give their sister to an Indian, and though she, too, loves him, would forgo her race to follow him, fate intervenes, for his people will not accept the white woman as wife to Strongheart. The play cleverly thought out and very ingeniously staged. There is splendid action, plenty of sparkle in the dialogue, good situations and intense dramatic purpose that are certain to grip the attention from the rising of the first curtain to hold it at high pitch until the final word is spoken.
"Strongheart," seemingly serious, is in reality full of breezy comedy for it reflects all the youthful gaiety of college life especially when football is in the air. All lovers of the great game will revel in the second act, which shows the training quarters between halves of a football game on which rests Columbia's supremacy. Even those playgoers who may not be vitally interested in football, will respond to the buoyant humor and dramatic force of this episode, which never fails to arouse intense enthusiasm.
Henry B. Harris has selected a company well calculated to handle effectively the roles entrusted to them. It includes Mrs. Boland, who has won much success as Mr. Edson's leading woman; Sydney Alsworth, Ira Hards, Frank J. McIntyre, Marjorie Wood, A. Byron Beasley, Francis Bonn, Beatrice Prentice, Richard Sterling, David Todd, Harrison Ford, Pauline Bayer, E. A. Turner, Desiree Lazard, Clay Boyd, Paul Dickey, and half a dozen other well known Eastern players.
"Go, ain't it Hell to be poor," a line which is vigorously repeated every night in "Checkers" was taken from a text for a sermon by a New York clergyman, and he argued that it being so, it was the duty of every man to do his utmost by sobriety, non-energetic industry, and industry to escape such a state.
LILLIAN RUSSELL IN "THE BUTTERFLY."
Lillian Russell will appear as a star comedian at the Academy of Music on January 22, in the new comedy of modern life by Kellert Chambers, entitled "The Butterfly." This is an excellent play, the usual interest and importance, as it marks the first appearance of the beautiful Lillian Russell in Charlotte as well as the initial performance here of the new comedy, the author of which is a brother of the distinguished dramatist, Hadon Chambers.
"The Butterfly" epitomizes the modern, up-to-date spirit of fashion, and the scenes are laid in New York city and Saratoga. Lillian Russell's role is that of Elizabeth Killgrew, better known to her intimates as Betty, who is, as one of the other characters explains, "the young widow of old Peter Killgrew, who gathered up a great many millions by stealing railroads, and invested a few thousands in salvation by supporting a church."
When the play opens the old financier has been dead just a year and a day and the beautiful Betty is blossoming into color. It turns out to be a most important day in the young widow's life, for within half an hour she has launched on a series of most extraordinary and complicated matrimonial adventures that keep all the characters of the comedy in a whirl of excitement and credit purposes up to the final curtain fall on the happy solution of Betty's problem.
Never having been in love, the young widow decides to annex the title and coronet of a British earl, an ambition that is promptly frustrated by the discovery of a new will in which old Peter Killgrew had imposed the condition of a native born citizen as a husband for Betty in the event of her remarriage. In the end she finds that she does not want a title, but does want something very much better. In a word she discovers that she is something more than a butterfly, after all, and the comedy comes to a highly sentimental and satisfactory conclusion.

Miss Russell has a role that gives ample scope for the display of her lightness and certainty in comedy characterization. Her appreciation of the humorous possibilities of her part is matched by the consummate skill with which she realizes them. In the south of her histrionic and the rare effulgences of her personal charms, Lillian Russell is easily one of the most conspicuous of the brilliant women who grace the American stage.
In "The Butterfly" she represents a portrait of the modern, high-spirited, modern woman of fashion, with a beating heart beneath a frivolous exterior. Miss Russell, who has always been acclaimed the best gowned woman on the stage, will wear some notably beautiful frocks.
Manager Joseph Brooks has surrounded the beautiful star with the best comedy cast of the year, including such well-known artists as Eugene Ormonde, John Flood, Fred L. Tilden, John Jack, Charles Lamb, Roland H. Hill, Isabel Richards, Kate Griffith and Rosalie de Vaux. The two beautiful scenes are from the brush of Richard Marson.
SOUSA'S "THE FREE LANCE."
That John Philip Sousa has not lost his knack of writing stirring, martial tunes, as well as popular melodies; that Harry B. Smith's humor has not lessened since he wrote "Robin Hood"; and that there still remains a virtue in the older ideals of genuine comic opera; are three things, among others, that are said to be demonstrated thoroughly in the forthcoming presentation of "The Free Lance" at the Academy of Music Friday, January 25th.
The principals of the cast are Joseph Cawthorn, Nella Burgen, Jeanette Lowrie, George Tallman, Albert Hart, George Schiller and Stanley Murphy. A chorus of 50 voices is used in the ensemble numbers. The cast is the original one, which was first presented "The Free Lance" at the New Amsterdam Theatre, New York.
—Story-hour will be observed at the Carnegie Library this afternoon from 4 to 5 o'clock. Mrs. Annie Smith Ross will tell the children stories of Lee and Jackson.
