South Carolinians Do Not Find Their.

Man at Fayetteville.

Special to The Observer.

Fayetteville, March 13.—Late last night or early this morning quite a number of South Carolinians alighted; from a northbound train, where a large crowd of citizens and sheriffs officers met them. There were no violent demonstrations and they were shown all through the jail to convince them that the negro McClary, who attempted to assault Miss Pitman, was not there.

"Do you know," said the elevator boy, "I didn't know till to-day that we built elevators."

He was addressing the night watchman, who was coming in. "Let me tell you, my boy," said the watchman, "there's a whole lot we do here you haven't found out yet. The elevator we shipped to-day was a regular dandy. The cage was shipped out of the wood shop and the running gear and apparatus out of the Dilworth shop. When I was surprised Billy laughed at me and said he used to sell elevators for the company when he was elevator boy on this elevator."

"We make elevators all right," said the watchman, "but don't you listen too much to what Billy says. He's liable to tell you he's bought one of the Pyramids in Egypt. What else have you shipped to-day?"

"Four yarn reels went out and a whole lot of hangers and pulleys. It stumps me what people do with so many pulleys. Every day it's pulleys and hangers, hangers and pulleys going out. Big pulleys, little pulleys, split pulleys, and then there's hangers, couplings and set collars. Gears is also a big item. All kinds of wheels, in fact."

"Sounds like business is moying," said the watchman. "It's worse than moving—it's humming. People like to send us orders because we deliver the goods on time," said the boy. "We best the railroads all to pieces on delivering machinery, and we make the machinery, too."
