FALLS THROUGH BRIDGE.

Man Who Says His Name is Charlie Smith, of Charlottesville, Va., Found Under Iron Bridge on Sugar Creek Road in Pool of Blood.

Charlie Smith, who said he was from Charlottesville, Va., and formerly lived in Charlotte, was found under the iron railroad bridge which spans the Sugar Creek road last night between 11 and 12 o'clock. Some negroes en route home from church came across him. He was conscious and asked for help. He was carried to the side of the road and propped against the bank. Where his head had lain, a rocky piece of ground, was a pool of blood. The news was telephoned to police headquarters and two officers went down. When an Observer man, who had got wind of the fact that there had been an accident of some sort, reached the place, the man was surrounded by a crowd of negroes, conversing in low tones.

Smith, who is about 45 years old, talked lucidly, considering his condition. He said he lives in Charlottesville, Va., but formerly lived here. He came in on No. 29, got off at the "C. C." crossing (evidently the Seaboard) and was walking up the track when he fell through the bridge trestle. The back of his head was badly cut. He may have been drinking, but the shock of the fall of 20 feet or more sobered him. The railroad authorities were notified and an ambulance was despatched to take him to a hospital.

THE RIGHT SORT OF CORK.

Mecklenburg Fish Won't Sink Just Any Sort of Cork—They Like the Salisbury Brand.

"I had a funny experience out here on the creek the other day," said a Charlotte fisherman.

"How was that?" asked a chorus of voices.

"Why, I went out with a friend of mine and fished for minnows, cats and suckers—you know the little fellows that you have around here?"

"Well, sir, I had luck from the very beginning. Every time I dropped my hook I got a bite and every time I lifted my pole I got a fish. But my companion never as much as got a nibble until we were about ready to quit, when I told him to take my hook and try it and then his luck changed."

"My friend is a teetotaler; I take a toddy now and then. Trying to discover the difference in our hooks I thought of the old saying: 'He drinks like a fish.'"

"An idea struck me. I asked my partner where he got his cork, and he said it came out of a Peruna bottle. That was explanation enough; mine came out of a Salisbury corn liquor jug. The fish knew the real thing."

Mr. Joel Brown, of Concord, was a guest of the Buford yesterday.
