PUBLISHERS' ANNOUNCEMENT.

No. 34 South Tryon street. Telephone numbers: Business office, Bell phone 78; city editor's office, Bell phone 234.

Advertising rates are furnished on application. Advertisers may feel sure that through the columns of this paper they may reach all Charlotte and a portion of the best people in this State and upper South Carolina. This paper gives correspondents as wide latitude as it thinks public policy permits, but it is in no case responsible for their views. It is much preferred that correspondents sign their names to their articles, especially in cases where they attack persons or institutions, though this is not demanded. The editor reserves the right to give the names of correspondents when they are demanded for the purpose of personal satisfaction. To receive consideration a communication must be accompanied by the true name of the correspondents.

THE RESURRECTION.

In the end of the Sabbath, as it began to dawn toward the first day of the week, came Mary Magdalene and the other Mary to see the sepulchre.

And, behold, there was a great earthquake: for the angel of the Lord descended from heaven, and came and rolled back the stone and sat upon it.

His countenance was like lightning, and his raiment white as

And for fear of him the keepers did shake, and became as dead men.

And the angel answered and said unto the women. Fear not ye: for I know that ye seek Jesus, which was crucified.

He is not here: for He is risen, as He said. Come, see the place where the Lord lay.

And go quickly and tell his diciples that He is risen from the dead; and, behold He goeth before you into Galilee; there shall ye see him; lo, I have told you.

Parliament by the bill authorizing construction of the long-cherished project of a railroad tunnel under the band thinks it's right. No, no; I mean 200 cats. No, again; 2 cats is right...... I suppose, of course, the plural of tailexplanation as might be supposed. It is true that as a purely economic proposition there could be no valid vertiser would like to take hold. Two spite of the protests which terests and the French ports of Calais prevailed were purely military ob future invasion through an easily cutting off its supply of air. vious and fatal objection, the full sigvasion. Yet that is by no means the ease. The danger of a foothold being obtained by a small invading force coming by water may be slight, but such a happening certainly cannot be rejected as impossible. If an invading force got possession for a short time of the country near Dover, it tunnel's mouth, and then the way would be open for the sending of an army through the tunnel. It is true that the British government could go to the extreme of destroying the tunnel itself instead of merely blocking its entrance; but The Economist points out the difficulties in the way of relying upon this as an alternative. The responsibility," it says, "of destroping some twenty millions of property by merely pressing a button is so burdensome that it is conceivable, to ly the least, that the button might not be pressed in time. * * * The mas haracterized it in the experimental trials, and in the end the mouth of the tunnel might be in the enemy's be beyond repair. It is even possible tunnel, the result of a sudden access of over-caution, might be the last disturbing factor in the relations between us and France, and so precipitate hostilities." These are sufficient reasons when it s considered that there is no pretence of keeping in England soldiers enough to prevent a French army, once safely landed at Dover from marching on and taking London. No onger can be said, as Saxon Harold is represented as having retorted in answer to a threat of Norman William (with more oratory than truth, as the event showed), that England's strongest castles were her widest plains. This is a day of standing armies and navies, and England is as essentially nation. The one answer is that it might be practicable to frame an international agreement that the tunnel shall not in any contingency be used for purposes of war-an answer which the London paper dismisses

o break faith might become so vast. In addition to these solid considerations there was of course, the powerful sentimental one. Britain is unwilling to think or herself as other than an island in the fullest sense. No wonder that the decision to remain 'compassed by the inviolate sea" was reached almost unanimously and without the least division along party with scorn as promising no real security whatever where the temptation
