It was scarcely daylight when I left the house to catch a TWO which was to convey me to the country where I was to some yne to the country where I was to spend the day. Indeed ONE and INE mark the beginning and the end of the part of day to which I refer. The tip, though short, was pleasant, but I was glad when I reached the home of my friend. Jersie, for we had not seen each other since parting at college several months previous. Her welcome was most FOUR as was also that of her brother. THREE, whom I had never seen. In spite of his old-fashioned Biblical name, he is a fine looking young man and I found him delightfully entertaining. I sat on the perch, leaning upon its SIX, and watched him dig up the FIVE plants which were scattered profusely over the lawn. It seems a pity that the FIVE can be used for such appetizing greens and yet be such a misance. After the dinner we all went for a ramble through the large woods near the house. 252-DIAMOND. ter the dinner we all went for a ramble through the large woods near the house. Just on the edge of the forest, sitting on a mossy DIGHT, was a dear old lady with a face like a SEVEN. She was a neighbor of my friends and said she yas searching for violets. In the twingth THREE walken with me to the flation, and as certainly as NINE is the holdele of end, so I felt that this was only the beginning of the end.
