indscent exposures of person on the midway at the recent Fair, is the announcement which Solicitor Heriot Clarkson made last night to an Observer man. An interesting rumor to some such effect as this was on the streets yesterday, but no verification was obtained until Mr. Clarkson was called up over the telephone last night when he made this statement.

"As long as I am solicitor I propose to present to the grand jury all the facts which I obtain as to gambling and alleged lewdness. I am not going to prosecute a negro crapshooter for gambling with 16 cents and say nothing to the grand jury about information I have that gambling was in progress on the midway last week for larger stakes. I can't prosecute; I am merely going to present the facts as I have them and allow the grand jury, whose prerogative it is, to pass on them. When there is evidence of open and notorious gambling or lewdness it is my duty to report these things, because there is a statute which forbids them."

This was the sum and substance of all Mr. Clarkson had to say upon the subject. Asked who was indictable, he made no answer except to say that that was not his business: it was the duty of the grand jury to ascertain these facts upon the evidence which be placed before them. This of men will be made to say is responsible for the alleged ch of the law; and then the court and Solicitor Clarkson will do the

LIKELY TO BE SEPARATE IN-DICTMENTS.

If this means anything at all, it means that the directors of the Meck-lenburg Fair Association will be in-dicted at the next term of the crimidicted at the next term of the criminal court, which convenes here in December, for allowing the wheels of fortune to run, and girls in tights to dance on the midway at the Fair. It is a fact that Mr. Clarkson in his statement to The Observer did not distinguish between the gambling and the exposure of the girls. Every the exposure of the girls. Every time he referred to one, he referred to the other in the same connection, the significance of which is that the directors will likely stand indicted for two separate offenses. There were at least four shows on the pike where the alleged in decent exposure was made, and the wheels of fortune were even more numerous.

His disclaimer was surprising and for a time set at rest the thought that the directors were going to be indicted, because it was generally believed that he would know of any possible prosecutions. WHO IS INDICTABLE?

One member of he local bar hesitated when questioned as to who was indictable for the gambling which is said to have been engaged in on the It was his opinion, however, that the city officials made a mistake when they allowed the gambling to proceed, in the first place, and again when they failed to put an end to it while the Fair was in progress. He thought the gamblers themselves were certainly the first who should be made defendants in such a case, but as a matter of law, finally said that the fair authorities might be liable. The wisdom of such a prosecution he did not fail to question. Another lawyer delivered his opinion no compromising words and declared that as a principle of law, the directors were indictable, being directly responsible for what took place on the midway. No matter, however, who is responsible it is a question with many whether the Fair directors will be suffered to enter into a trial, it being argued that this appears to be a mere subterfuge on the part of some in order to escape censure for not indicting the fakirs when were here, and putting a speedy end to the alleged gambling and in-

MAYOR FRANKLIN'S PART. Hardly less interesting than the thove announcement is a statement made to an Observer man by Mayor r. S. Franklin, who, in the first place, denies the interview appearing in this paper prior to the Fair, which placed him on record as saying that he favored a wide-opened institution, and believed that a departure from past customs would make a successful Fair. Mayor Franklin, after contendng that this was an inaccuracy in otation, now declares that he issued instructions that the gambling wheels be closed and that the lewdness on the pike be stopped. These instructions, says he, were never carried out, and he being without police authority, was unable to put an and to the institutions. This brings to light another interesting feature of the subject which has not been given publication. He asserts his innocence when it comes to placing the blame upon the proper person for allowing the alleged violation of the law, and is anxious to go down on the proper people from the city went of young people from the city went of the property of young people from the city went of the property of the carried to the open carried out, and he being without policy and he people from the city went of the open carried out, and he being without policy and he people from the city went of the carried to the open carried out, and he being without policy and here the open carried out, and he being without policy and here the open carried out, and he being without policy and here the open carried out, and he being without policy and here the open carried out, and he being without policy and here the open carried out, and he being without policy and here the open carried out, and he being without policy and here the observer.

Gentlemen: As I alone opposed the resolution passed by this board recommending that First street be widened to 50 feet from Tryon to Mint street, and opened and extended that width to Cedar street, it is due to the other members of this board that I record the grounds for my opposition, that it may appear that I am neither influenced in this matter by pride of fluenced in this matter by pride of opinion or by hostile feeling towards the car line company, which company is back of the First street proposi-

It must be borne in mind that when this proposition came to this board the map of the street; and the bids for building it, showed that the street, incliding sidewalks, was designed to be only 40 feet wide at each end, with a bulge of 10 feet in the middle, and that the street was not to be macad-

Had the street been so built it seems manifest that it would have been available only as a car line route, and as it was designed that the city pay for the street, or car route, I can see no reason why the city's appropriation would be anything more or less than subsidy to the car company.

Under these conditions this board passed the resolution recommending that the street, including sidewalks, be wineded to 50 feet, the city to pay the cost of building the street and condemning the land necessary for it, and stand all hazards of the law suits incident thereto.

ACTION NOT PRUDENT.

The resolution suggests no limit to the amount the city should pay, nor does the resolution suggest that the street be macadamized, which will have to be done if the street is to be built for use as a street. In my opinion it is not wise or even prudent that this board, from which so much is expected, especially in the present condition of the city's finances, make such a recommendation to the board of aldermen. As far as this board knows the citizens who will have to pay for the street, and who are supposed to need it have not asked for it, the property holders along the street who it is to be presumed would re-

Plowing Through Macsdam.

Yesterday morning the Atlantic Bithulithic Company began to break up and remove the macadam on North Tryon street, between Trade and Fifth. Instead of picking it up in the old way, by hand, those in charge plowed it up, using a street roller to pull the plow and four negroes to hold it in the ground and guide it. The big roller moved right along and the plow tore a furrow as it went. The machinery and four hands can do more than a dozen men with picks.

of the board shares this opinion), be not less than $20,000. With deference to you gentlemen, I say that the board of aldermen should have these facts from which to determine whether the street is needed as a street, whether it should be macadamized, and know on what the recommendation is bas-

My opinion is that the proper and only fair thing for the city to do, is only fair thing for the day to build the street at its expense, provided the necessary land is given or paid for by the property holders and car line company to make the street not less than sixty feet wide, and provided further that the land be accepted without any strings to it so that the city may build the street only so good and no better than in its discretion is needed now. This is what is demanded by the city of pri-vate citizens, and as the city if this is done, would be building a very expensive street for an anticipated but not present need it would be very liberal dealing with the car line company for whose present need the street
