An old man from Brindletown, some white men were killed in a freight ten miles from Morganton, walked into the express office a few days ago with a little package which he asked the agent to express to the mint at Philadelphia. When asked the value, he said he didn't know, but probably about $200. The agent examined the package and found it contained gold nuggets. It was sent on and yesterflay there came back a little bag of gold containing $620, the result of the asiny of that sent. This old man had panned this out himself from a branch that runs through his farm.
