Mr. Taft has reasons plenty as blackberries and, of course, speaks for the administration, but it does not now lie in the mouth of his party to deny responsibility after all these years of brag. The Secretary ought at least to have administed in fairness that if was not the Democrats who brought on the trouble. But then there was no need to say so because everybody knows that no Democrat has so much as pushed a broom in a government office for almost eleven years.

Grawing separately the cross of these excessive tariff charges. It would be only a change of form with the same result.

I have seen a careful estimate showing that every family in the United States contributes an average of one hundred dollars per year to the gains of the beneficiaries of the Dingley tariff, in facteased cost of necessities alone. This explains why those who live on wages and salaries find themselves no better off, notwithstanding repeated increases in their pay.

And issuing bonds in time of peace! repeated increases in their pay.
