The last and the final chapter in the Hirsch-Lemmond controversy of long standing was closed on yester even when Judge Moore, in Superior Court, granted the petition of Mrs. Henry Hirsch, or Emma Lemmond for a divorce. No objection was oflered to this proceeding by the nominal defendant, who has been in Asheville nearly a year. No counsel represented him and no word in objection to the granting of the divorce jection to the granting of the divorce was uttered, except the jointed cross-examination of the witnesses, par-ticularly of the plaintiff by Judge Moore, who knew nothing of the

The case tried before 'Squire Hilton and a jury resulted in a mistrial and finally after much contention was dropped. Notice of an intention to sue for divorce was given by the woman immediately after the first trial and this action terminated yes-

The two main issues in the case which were to be decided by the jury were as to whether the plaintiff entered into any marriage ceremony with the defendant and whether she entered into the ceremony by threats or coercion. Both these issues were answered in favor of the plaintiff. This case was calendared for te-day, but the court has the right to take a litigation of this kind up any time unless there is resistance. Messrs, Plummer Stewart and F. R. McNinch appeared for the plaintiff.

"NEVER SAW HIM BEFORE."

Thus Swears Defendant When Faced by Man Who Testilies Against Him On Charge of Retailing—Witness Says He Has Known Him 10 Years.

A direct, unadulterated, unmistakable clash of testimony but up to Re-corder Smith an issue of veracity yes-terday morning which he side-stepped, leaving the question to be wrest-led with by the grand jury, holding the Jefendant on a light bond. Tom Helms, a reformed Salvation Army man (reformed sinner who joined the army, not a member who swore off being one), swore that seven weeks ago when he was standing in a drug store, Tom Norkett came in, diagnosed his case as that of a thirsty one and offered to get the "licker." The offer was accepted by Helms for whom reformation was as yet a thing in the future. The liquor was pro-60 cents being the price paid.

not to know him. I may have seen him on the streets conducting religious services but I never sold him any blind tiger liquor."

"I have known Norkett for ten years," averred the prosecuting witness. "He married a 'cousin of mine.' I guess I ought to know him. Furthermore, a relative of mine was present at the time the transaction took place. The police found out about the sale from him and that's about the sale from him and that's how come they summonsed me."

FAIR CIRCUIT, DISSOLVES.

Pairs This Fall Will Be Held in Several Cities Independent of Others—Mr. Creswell in Columbia Attending Meeting of Secretaries of Four States.

The dissolution of the North Carolina circuit of fairs has been an; sounced and the events this fall in the several cities of the State, Charlotte, Winston-Salem, Greensboro and Sallsbury, will be held independently of each other. The trouble is said to have originated over the selection of dates, and when the State organization could not agree upon time for holding the individual fairs, it was thought best to drop the matter and allow each city to choose its own dates. There seems to have been a general break-up in the circuit and there is a deal of speculation right now as to what the ultimate out-

It is recalled that an effort was made several days ago to harmonize the several associations of Virginia with those of North Carolina and fix with those of North Carolina and fix dates which would allow no city in the two States to had fairs at the same time. This effort fell through. Virginia not being willing to enter the agreement, having already decided upon dates. When this failure was confronted it appears that trouble began to rise in the North Carolina circuit, which precipitated the dissolution. The Winston-Salem papers state that the fair association of that town has already agreed upon its dates, irrespective of what on its dates, irrespective of what others may do, and also state that the general belief is that Greensboro and Salisbury will be governed by the action of the Winston association.

Coloring is given this story by the trip yesterday to Columbia, S. C. of Mr. C. M. Creswell, secretary of the Mecklenburg Fair Association, to meet with a general meeting of the secretaries of North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Florida. Of this meeting, its personnel and pur-pose, The Columbia State has the folpose, Tri Columbia State has the following to say:

"Representing the fair associations of South Carolina, North Carolina, Georgia and Florida, the secretaries of these associations will meet this morning at 11 o'clock at the Columbia Hotel. There will be at least 12 of these representatives.

"Mr. J. E. Pogne, secretary of the

"Mr. J. E. Pogue, secretary of the North Carolina State Fair Association; Mr. C. M. Creswell, secretary of the Mecklenburg Fair Association; Mr. Frank Welden, secretary of the Geor-gia State Fair Association; Mr. Frank E. Beane, secretary of the Aukusta Fair Association; Mr. L. G. Holland, secretary of the Jacksonville Fair Association; Mr. Thomas J. L. Brown, representing the Florida State Fair Association; Mr. John Wood, secretary of the Greenville Fair Associa-tion; Mr. Paul V. Muore, representing the Spartanburg Fair Association; Mr. McCartha, of the Batesburg Fair Association, and Mr. S. M. Efird, secretary of the Lexington Fair Association, are among the guests expected to be present.

"This conference will be held to arrange the dates for the different fairs this year, in order that there may be no conflict. Plans will also be made to secure some of the best attractions A number of fine horses will be sent from one fair to the other and a firstclass carnival may be engaged for the circuit. There are a hundred things to be looked after and Mr. Love always has thought for every detail. It is the minutiae, seeming trivialities, which in the end insure the success of the State fairs."

though not upon the face of the facts a very live one, was fought out for several hours. Ernest Couser, it seemeth, had once upon a time been possessed of a nag, which in the course of events he sold to Isam Stover, the party of the second part. Finding his newly acquired property to be somewhat delicate, Isam handled it tenderly, working it only at employment not too strenuous for its advancing years and impaired health. Becoming dissatisfied he brought suit against the horse's former owner for against the horse's former owner for the sum of $50, claiming that it was not the article he had bargained for. ## "That's Sister's Old Dress"

No little girl likes to have her playmates say: "That's your sister's old dress you are wearing." Do you know that you can avoid any such noyance to your children by having the fabrics dyed another color when you make over old clothes for them. It not only makes the clothes look different-it makes them really 'new" in appearance. Costs but little, either.
