FRANK GILREATH. T. T. GILMER.

Making provision for the future of those we love is one of the highest things we are capable of doing in this world. It is the ordinary and not the wise man who simply thinks of the present. But we are a bit larger and wiser when with the lies beyond. Many a woman has been lovingly cared for by her husband while he was with her, only to awaken heartbroken some day with the double grief of the taking away of her husband and the support of herself and her children. A man eannot control the former, but he can avoid the latter. Many a woman has gone through tortures of suffering by the lack of foresight of a devoted husband-devoted in all save the one thought of what she should do when he was no more.
