> Situation Shows Little Improvement. According to the most reliable sources, the situation in the textile trade in the State shows little mateexperts say that the condition of the market is a little firmer for that reason. No substantial advance is looked for until the fall. June 1st will witness the shutting down of a number of mills in this and sister States. All of the Holt-Mebane factories in and about Graham will have closed and others too numerous to mention. One of the unfortunate and to-be-regretted effects of this general shutting down of mills will be the vast number of the unemployed thrown upon the State.

Home Speaking Begins. At last the Horne forces have commenced public speakings, the first of which is to be to-night at Dilworth

The hour is 8 o'clock and everyhall. body is invited no matter what can-didate is personally favored. YOUNG COUPLE MARRY.

Miss Jess Caldwell Becomes the Wife of Mr. Clarence Smith, a Son of Capt. and Mrs. T. T. Smith. At the home of the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Evelyn McLeod, 604 North Tryon street, Miss Jess Caldwell and Mr. Clarence Smith, two popular members of Charlotte's younger set, were married yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock, Rev. W. M. Kincald, D. D., pastor of the First Presbyterian church officiating. There were no attendants except Mr. Will White, who was best man. The bride and groom entered the room together, standing in front of a pyramidal bank of ferns was a large silver candelabra. Ferns, vines and daisies wer in decorating the hall and sfairway of the home. The effect of white lights upon the scene was unusually beautiful. The wedding march was played by Miss Kate Smith, sister of the groom. The bride was gowned in a beautiful dress of white batiste and car-ried white roses. She is a granddaughter of Mrs. Evelyn McLeod and niece of Miss Jane Alexander, both of whom are highly esteemed here. She has made her home here sint the death of her mother. Mr. Smith is the 12th child of Capt. and Mrs. T. T. Smith, and is connected with the Charlotte Supply Company. The bride is not only a young woman of beauty, but of rare business ability and a jewel in her home. She has held a position of trust at the Adams Grain and Provision Company for several years. Their personal regard and appreciation for her worth was testified to by a handsome wedding gift consisting of a full chest of silver, a leather lounge and a check for handsome sum. Numbers of other valuable gifts in silver, cut glass and china and furniture were received.
