GRAHAM-MOSES MARRIAGE HG EVENT AT CHAPEL HILL

complishments.

Special to The Observer.

Chapel Hill, June 25.—Ever since the announcement was first made public the interest of friends of the contracting parties all over the State, and especially that of the citizens nere, has been centred on the marriage of Miss Susan Williams Moses to Prof. Edward Kidder Graham. In fact, it is safe to say that no event has ever happened in staid old Chapel Hill that carried with it a more integse enthusiasm or attracted a wider observation than the harmonious blending of these two beautiful lives.

A more appropriate day could not have been selected for the auspicious occasion. It was indeed one of those rare, perfect days in June when the birds sing sweetest; when the world seems gayest and happiest, and the very atmosphere is filled with the joy of life. The absence of all formality and display in the ceremony and costumes, which was in thorough keeping with the lives of both parties, in fact the air of simplicity that seemed to surround the whole affair, made it eminently fitting that the close of such a day should have been selected as the time when they should fare the world together with been selected as the time when they should fape the world together with but a single thought and a common destiny.

Precisely at 6 o'clock yesterday ev-Precisely as 6 o'clock yesterday evening the lovely bride, beautifully attired in a plain white net over satin, her only fewel being a sunburst of pearls, the gift of the groom, carrying bride's roses and leaning on the arm of her father, marched across the lawn at the side of Dr. Alexander's home to the Chapel of the Cross. It was indeed a magnificent and inspiring sight. As they entered the old church, whose ivy-covered walls never looked grander or more stately, and whose very silence and sternness seemed a wholeseme approval to the happy event, the organ under the skilled touch of Miss Ono Tilghman, of South Carolina, began to peal forth of South Carolina, began to peal forth the inspiring strains of Lohengrin's wedding march. The bride and her father were followed up the aisle by the ushers, con-sisting of Drs. Thomas Ruffin, J. G. DeR. Hamilton, L. R. Wilson and Professors W. S. Bernard and E. V. 'At the altar the party was Howell. At the altar the party was met by the groom, who, leaning on the arm of his brother and best man, Mr. Archibald Graham, Jr., of Charlotte, came from the vestry room to the right of the altar. Here, as the the right of the altar. Here, as the evening light was streaming through the windows, and casting its many varieties of colors on the beautiful green and white decorations, and amid the solemn stillness that pervaded on all sides, the Rev. W. H. Meade in a few very impressive words pronounced them man and wife. Then to the joyous notes of Mendelssohn's wedding march the smiling couple, happy in their new-found joy and carrying with them the blessings and best wishes of their many friends, left the church, entered the carriage which was waiting and drove to Durham, where they took the train for an extended tour of Northern cities. The bride is the accomplished daughter of Mr. Edward Pearson Moses, a former teacher of Raleigh, now of Tennessee. A constant visitor to Chapel Hill for the past several years, she has by her winning ways, her sweet disposition, her charming personality and her beautiful that in these latter flavs some personality and her beautiful character won for herself a host of friends and admirers, who wish for her life's richest and choicest blessings. She is not only a most lovable character, but a woman of fine intellectual at-tainments as well. For several years she has been engaged as teacher of English in St. Mary's, Tulane University and lastly at Sweet Briar Institute in Virginia, all of which are high testimony of her ability as a scholar and teacher.

The groom is the popular professor of English literature in the University of North Carolina. A scholarly, resolute, conservative, broad-minded man, he is known throughout a wide ability, and loved and admired by every student and faculty member in the University for his loyalty to the the University for his loyalty to the intsitution, his fairness as a teacher and his worth as a man. He is generally denominated "the student's friend," and his general willingness and readiness to help them on all occasions, in matters both weighty and trivial, has won for him a high and lofty place in the heart of the students.

The couple were the recipients of a large number of handsome and useful presents, bearing strong testimony to the regard and esteem in which they are held.

was simply a survival of the habits of the old slave days. In some respects the change is good and in others not so much so. Before the war and durso much so. Before the war and during it the master would fight for the slave and the slave for his master.
It was an anomaly but it was the truth. People North and West, who never had any Southern affiliations, never could and never will understand this thing. Now the races are pulled apart, yet the sentiment among the whites towards the blacks and vice versa is much finer and truer here than in the North and West.
Only a day or two ago an Indiana Only a day or two ago an Indiana man was telling me of a large manufacturing town in that State, where there is a sign at the station that ao blacks are allowed in the place, and he told me that he went to a circus there and that the town folk made the circus company leave its negro drivers well outside of the town limits, forbidding them to appear on the streets in any way.

William Hall has seen Asheville grow from the straggling but evercharming mountain village to the beautiful little city of to-day, and the afternoon of that very day Col. Virgil S. Lusk told me that he had seen every house built in Asheville and now standing, except four. This is a very cemarkable record indeed.

Biltmore has been so much written about that it is not worth while to undertake to tell anything of its glories. I had seen the house, or rather the chateau, before and I had traveled far through the domain of its over-lord, in his Pisgah forest pre-serve and through the beautiful "pinkwhere in summer time Vanderbilt maintains a school for forestry, this being under charge of the gifted Dr. Schenck, who in the winter has a building at Asheville where the school is conducted, young men coming there from various parts of the United States. Biltmore is simply a study, from start to finish, and every plant and shrub and tree which can be found is there. It has been said to be the purpose of Mr. Vanderbilt, some of these days, to give the place, so far as the estate is concerned, to the United States, for forestry study and for the application of forestry work. It was with him that Gifford Pinchot began his great work, he being now the head forester of the Unit ed States, and known the world over. When I was in Pisgah Forest some years ago the cutting of "ripe" tim ber, giant poplar trees, etc., was being conducted systematically and it is said that enough timber has been sold from that vast forest to pay for the original cost of the land and yet leave the woods just as they ought to be. Surely this is a lesson to the lumbermen who so mangle and scar poor nature in so large a part of the State. In the western part of North Carolina a new terror is added, in the shape of the people who get bark for the tanneries and who remind one very much of those who used to kill the buffaloes merely for their hides and leave the great plains spread with the untouched carcasses. An uncle of mine told me once that he had seen thousands of buffaloes thus skinned and left to wither and putrify on the

As we drove along towards Biltmore we saw from time to time signs which said that grounds were "private," "no trespassing permitted," and all that sort of thing. It didn't use to be that way. The world at Asheville and round about was quite open then, and one went like a bird whither one would, but latter-day ex-clusiveness, not native at all, or to the manner born, has shut out some would polk about anywhere if not forbidden—depredate possibly—and so Mr. Vanderbilt has had to keep his place private, so far as the house is concerned, since some visitors would actually peep in the windows, to see what was inside, and possibly to get a glimpse of the great folk who might be within. Such an example of bad manners would have been impossible in the Asheville of 1874. So it came about that as we drove along, on the splendid June morning, looking back once in a while at the scenery so rich and so varied, we came to what North Carolinians in general call a "fork of the road" and there to the left stood a man in plain clothes, evidently a native, who didn't have to say a word, for his mere presence, barring the way, was an outward and visible sign to William Hall to turn to the right, since the road-way to the left led to the house, Mr. Vanderbilt and his good wife being "in residence," to use an official term. As we drove back to Asheville, some gentlemen of that city were talking about its remarkably fine water supply, and that afternoon Senator Webs gave me an illustration of the coldness and purity of the water, which comes through a big main from a boid stream in the Black Mountains. VIOLATED HEPBURN ACT.

Roanoke, Va., June 25.-J. H. Cra-bill and his son, E. M. Crabill, both bill and his son, E. M. Crabill, both of Roanoke, were arrested here last night on a charge of riding on rail-road passes in violation of the Hepburn, act. They were taken before United States Commissioner White and bailed for their appearance later in the week. The warrants were sworn out by the Norfolk & Western Railroad after a consultation with the United States district attorney. It is said that recently a number of passes United States district attorney. It is said that recently a number of passes have been missed from the round house in Rosnoke, and it is charged that by some means the Crabills got hold of one or two of them and used them in riding on the passenger trains of the Norfolk & Western. The district attorney, after examining the evidence as submitted to him, decided that the Crabills could be prosecuted under the Hepburn act which provides a penalty for such violations of a fine of not less than $200 and not more than $2,000.

DRIVES OUT . O. RHEUMATISM

A good liniment or plaster, or some good home remedy will usually give temporary relief from the pain of Rheumatism, but the disease is more than skin deep and cannot be rubbed away, nor can it be drawn out with a plaster. Such treatment neither prevents nor cures; the excess of acid, which produces Rheumatism, is still in the blood and the disease can never be cured while the circulation remains saturated with this irritating, painproducing uric acid poison. The trouble will shift from place to place, settling on the nerves and causing pain and inflammation at every exposure or after an attack of indigestion or other irregularity. When neglected or improperly treated, Rheumatism becomes chronic and does not depend upon climatic conditions to bring on an attack, but remains a constant, painful trouble. S. S. drives out Rheumatism by neutralizing and expelling the excess of acid from the blood. It purifies and invigorates the circulation so that instead of an acid-laden stream constantly depositing aric acid in the that instead of an acid-laden stream, constantly depositing uric acid in the joints, muscles, nerves and bones, the entire system is nourished and made healthy by rich, life-giving blood.
