Manager Armfield Makes Reply to the Recent Communication of Hickory's Manager — Challenged Party Has the Right to Name Terms of Combat—The Whole Controversy Reviewed.

To the Editor of The Observer: The unmitigated brass and gall that inspired the article published in your paper of the 11th instant, over the signature of Manager Latta, of the Hickory team, doubtless gave birth to many smiles throughout the old North State this morning as your many readers who are interested in sports read the columns of your paper containing matters of interest to them. With great fulsomeness of speech Manager Latta attempts to explain why he now desires to "take water" on his proposition to have his team play Fayetteville a series of games to decide the amateur cham-pionship of the State. With a truly regard for the niceties of interpretation, he proceeds to en-lighten an ignorant world as to the exact meaning of the word "good" as used by him in the challenge he Manager Latta protested the accuracy of this statement, and issued a challenge for a series of games between Hickory and Fayetteville "In Charlotte or some other good town. The subject matter contemplated by the challenge was baseball, as any child not yet in its teens can see. To this challenge Fayetteville replied, accepting it, although its team had disbanded, and naming Wilmington as the "good town" and not later than the 27th instant as the time. Its reason for naming Wilmington was that it was a "good town" for baseball, the best in the State in point of average attendance, and the time selected was that the games could be after the Wilmington team had nnished the league games, thus insuring a good attendance for the proposed se-Hickory stated that ries of games. the cost of getting there was greater to its team. It would be creditable to both Hickory and Fayetteville to contest, in a national sport, for an amateur record with professional players-I don't think!

Payetteville's team had disbanded when the challenge came; its bat-tery, with which it has won games from all comers, from points in both, North and South Carolina, had left for West Virginia, where they had signed up for other games. We knew that we could not get the same battery, but we were willing to take chances on that score. When challenged, if the challenged party has not the right to name the terms of the combat, then our educa-tion in such matters is sadly deficient. Mr. Latta agrees with us, for he says that it is granted that "the challenged party has that right."
