High Point, Aug. 12.—Mr. Eugene Morehend Armfield died lest night at his home on Broad street at 8:16 relock after an illness of two weeks a serious liver trouble. Armfield was in a critical condition from the day he was taken to his bed. A specialist was called from the Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore but he did not give any hope and notwithstanding the best medical tention and constant care of the nurses he gradually grew worse, ral-lying at times but only for a short He was a well-known citizen of High Point as well as of the State. rviving him is his wife, father, ther, three brothers, Messrs. Will Armfield, of Asheboro; Jesse Armfield, of Thomasville; and Frank Armfield, of this city; two sisters, Mrs. Frank Armfield, of Monroe, and Mrs. R. T. Pickens, of this city, and numerous relatives.

Mr. Armfield, soon after graduating from the University of Norta Carolina, took charge as cashier of the First National Bank of this city and for many years was identified with this institution, later becoming interested in the North Carolina Savings Bank and Trust Company and the North Carolina Pire Insurance Company, holding active offices in these two institutions. He neld many other positions of trust in the manmfacturing, industrial, educational and other interests nere and where. He was always ready to furthe progress of any enterprise for the upbuilding of High Point, putting his money in them and many times lending money to people and concerns that could not have gotten It otherwise, and there are many who will pay sincere tribute to their dead friend and benefactor. To his alma mater he was ever loyal and he has made many contributions in money and otherwise to the University of North Carolina. He was a member of one of the leading societies at the University and was honored on many occasions by the organization. Eupod qualities and many acts of kindness, many noble deeds of heart and hand, of which the world knew little of, have been done by him. He was reserved in his ways and did not attempt at show and there are many who will read these lines who will able. reflect and lay a wreath of love and remembrance upon his bier to-day. The writer has known Mr. Armfield for twenty years and during that time recalls several instances when he displayed that inner feeling of brotherly love to his fellow man in a true No trumpets proclaimed the deed but the hand and heart acted in response to the nature within. Mr. Armfield was a learned man, a brainy man in many respects. He was well up on literature and the arts and was a teacher to the pupil on most any question one may ask in ancient or modern history or matters of mo-

He graduated from Guilford College with class of 1886 and from the University of North Carolina with the class of 1888. He enthe banking business in 1888 as cashier of the National Bank of High Point. He is president of the Rank of Thomasville and the Bank of Alamance, both of which he organized and was the principal organizer and is a director in ten other banks throughout North Carolina, beeides being an officer and director in a dozen or more manufacturing plants. He is secretary and treasurer Association and director in the Mechanics' Perpetual Building and Loan in insurance and real estate. He is a trustee of the University of North Carolina, and is a member of the visiting board and founder of the Armfield Library of English Physiology in the University at a cost of $5,000 a year, which carries with it five scholarships perpetually. He is secretary of the North Carolina Children's Home Society, a philanthropic institution, and a contributor to various educational and religious institutions. Mr. Armfield is broad in his charities. His view of the matter is not to question "Was it this man's fault that he is in need?" but rather "Is he in need now, and what can I do to help him?" He has written several addresses on various subjects and is a member of the Modern Language Association and of the American Economic Association. member of the Jr. O. U. A. M.

EXISTING EXEMPTION LAWS.

Effects of North Carolina's Unneces sary Statutes Seen in Cases, of Merchants Who Attempt to do Business on Little or no Capital— The Statutes of This and Other Commonwealths Compared.

To the Editor of The Observer: It is pleasing to note that some is being brought to bear pressure looking to a repeal of the existing, and, to say the least, unnecessary exemption laws of our State. The North Carolina legislative act personal property of $500 to every got to South Carolina. And so the resident of the State exempt from execution or levy to satisfy any intion for helpless women and minor explains itself: tion for helpless women and minor children, whose husband and father through unfortunate business experience or otherwise might become financially involved. exemption laws of other States shows that North Carolina is neither the mean nor the extreme in this respect. Yet there are features of the North Carolina law that render it more obpoxious. It is available to every resident of the State, whereas in other Commonwealths it is almost without exception confined to housheholders or heads of families. The benefit of the homestead in the majority of States may be surrendered to meet a written obligation, but in North Carolina it cannot be legally waived. In Virginia and some other States the phrase "The homestead exemptions are hereby waived as to this obligation" is a part of promissory notes or other written evidences of debt. In many of the States comprising the large centres of population the homestead exemption law is virtually unknown. Notable among this group are New York, New Jersey, New Hampshire, Connecticut, Maryland, Maine, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island and Vermont. By conforming to a statute requiring that the homestead be set apart at the time acquired, registered and recorded as such, there is tentative provision for a very small exemption in New Jersey, New York and Connecticut, but instances are said of the People's Building and Loan to be so few where this is done that the law is practically a "dead letter." a great many States there are certain Association and it targety interested articles of personal property exempt from execution, such as mechanics' tools, agricultural implements, professional libraries, etc., but these are usually, if not always, subject to exeof purchase money. It is rarely the case outside of a few Southern States that exemptions can be taken in a stock of merchandise. Indeed, the homestead exemptions seem to be a distinctive feature of the commercial laws of Southern States. The amounts subject to such reservation vary from $1,500 in North Carolina $1,600 in Georgia, $2,000 in Virginia. to $5,000 or more in Oklahoma and Texas. In the last named State the homestead of a famil" in real estate includes property in My or town of the value of $5,000, in country not more than 200 acres of land. The North Carolina Legislature would take a step in the right direction to either repeal its present exemption law altogether, or so amend it as to provide for a waiver, and make it available only to heads of familles or those upon whom dependent persons rely for support. it should be impossible to claim exemptions in articles on which there is t does a means for defeating just obligations, in contradistinction it deligations, in contradistinction it de-tracts from the standing of those who authorities did? are successful and worthy, since it is a well known fact that mercantile agencies and others, in estimating an individual's responsibility as a basis

The Baltimore Sun Gently But Firmly Rejects Colonel Gadsden's Offer of His Noble Bird as a Fund-Raiser But Names a Citizen of Its Town Who Might Introduce Him Into the Enemy's Country and Start Him on a Round in the Cause of the People and Against Predatory Wealth, Baltimore Sun.

An unseemly controversy has arisen between The Charleston News and Courier and The Charlotte Observer about the famous Hong-Kong gander and the fat Chitty-gong hen, which have been performing such prodigies of valor for the Democratic campaign fund and to whose achievements The Sun has several times recently directed attention. It will be recalled that the gander and hen were sent to The Charleston paper by The Charlotte Observer and were raffled for the benefit of the Democratic cause. After sending the $25 raised by this raffle to Mr. Bryan for his campaign fund, The News and Courier seeks to belittle the funeral took place Tuesday. Mrs. poultry. The Hon. Philip H. Gadsden, of Charleston, who won the gander at Fleshman about three years ago and the raffle, says that he is a dismoved here, where she has since re-sided and made many friends. It was money, and that he cannot look him money, and that he cannot look him a sudden shock to her many friends, in the face, but averts his eyes. And Colonel Hemphill, the Charleston editor, adds that the hen is the eldest daughter of the cock that crowed on the morn of the day the Mecklenburg Declaration was proclaimed, and that the gander is also a native of North Carolina

The Chriotte Observer makes a bitgist or he would know that all Hong-Kong ganders are naturally so bashful and modest that they always avert their eyes when anybody looks 'at them. It further declares that both gander and hen were as beautiful as birds of paradise when they left their native dunghill in the Tar Heel State. Their present disreputable appearance, he adds, is due to the fact that they providing a homestead of $1,000 and have not had enough to eat since they
