Why Do Mosquitoes Bite Like She Do? "Why do not mosquitoes sting in September?" is the query put to an Observer man yesterday by a Charlotte lady. "Their bite has lost nothing of sharpness and their appetite none of its edge," said she. "But they are entirely noiseless. One never knows they are about, until their work is done." The Observer's mosquito editor is on his vacation. Consequently, the question is regrettably passed on. Probably Professor Zachary McClure, who specialized in the study of mosquitoes and whose goats could cast some light on the situation.

First Barbecue Endorsed Retailers by the Wholesalers of the City an Exceedingly Successful Affair—Several Addresses of Great Interest by Representatives of the Two Classes of the Mercantile Business—Elegant Master of Ceremonies Provision of Things to Eat—Crowd Estimated at 2,500—Baseball in the Afternoon, Game Being Won by Retailers.

Probably as many as 2,500 people attended the elegant barbecue given yesterday at Latta Park by the wholesale merchants of the city to the retailers. The spirit of harmony and good feeling which the event was conceived was manifested in all the exercises of the occasion, and the affair proved exceedingly enjoyable to the gathered hosts. The address given in the main pertinent and one listened not only to be entertained but to be benefited. The need of cordiality and co-operation between the jobber and the retailer was at every point emphasized and the spirit of the day was brought well into prominence. Mr. M. C. Mayer, who has taken a foremost interest in the movement, was master of exercises and performed this office with credit. The barbecue was well served by the multitude of men, women and children and many of them have never before enjoyed such a collection of beef, mutton, ham, bread and pickles as was provided. There was an abundance of these articles to tempt the appetite, and the heads of all meats and bread having been held in store and nicely prepared for the hungry visitors. Barrels of pickles were stationed at intervals within the enclosure and the crowd of cigar and cigarettes were lavishly bestowed. After the enormous crowd had fed itself to the full, there was plenty left to go part of the way around again.

MR. JOHNSON SPEAKS. "We come to-day to bury in oblivion the bitter dregs of the panic and to stimulate such interest as will continue to make Mecklenburg county the idol of the Old North State," said Mr. Mayer in his preliminary remarks, and he introduced as the first speaker, Mr. Norman H. Johnson, that whom, he said, no man had done more within the last three or four years for the merchants of North Carolina. Mr. Johnson arose and in a few minutes had the audience with a few practical points about the operation of a successful mercantile business. He spoke chiefly of the relation between the jobber and the retailer, which in his estimation, was reciprocal, there being an inter-relation between these spheres in the business work which could not be forgotten. He declared that trade relations of this country were built upon fine and well defined schemes of business and that the relation between the wholesaler and retailer should be one of mutual respect and understanding. He was trying to show these principles that there would be no line of demarcation at all. It was to him a sign of a moral awakening that merchants have begun to realize that character and reputation in their vocation was the first requisite to success. But, he further declared, there was certainly no general awakening so long as the domestic merchant failed to understand the attitude of the jobber.

"CREDIT TOO CHEAP." "Credit is too cheap," was the subject assigned Mr. J. Lee Phillips, a local retailer, and he delighted the crowd with the wit and humor which he injected into his remarks. He pointed out the difference in the methods pursued by the merchant and the banker when they are approached for credit. "The banker requires the applicant," said he, "to give a history of his life, to show how he allows him money, but the merchant makes no such demands." The address of Mr. Phillips was one of the most enjoyable of the day, his remarks being well illustrated by anecdotes.

MR. R. S. STOKES told how the merchants aided in the uplifting of a city. "I would remember when I came here 34 years ago and considered it a good day's walk to come out this far from the town to hunt. There was no Dilworth then, nor a North Charlotte. He declared that a majority of the merchants underestimate their ability to make a city grow and ventured the assertion that Charlotte would not be the thriving city it is to-day except for the efforts of men like Weddington, Durham and Mayer. Mr. J. Adams delivered a well-conceived address on the subject of co-operation and was given good attention. He spoke of the fundamental principles upon which all institutions are founded and cultivated, the chief of which was co-operation of effort among themselves. The character of a city is determined by the character of its institutions, and the strength of a city is measured by the strength of its institutions. "Trade among yourselves," was the keynote of his remarks.

MR. J. H. LITTLE SPEAKS. Mr. J. H. Little spoke in part as follows: "The Relation of the Banker to the Merchant." "It seems to me that public spirit as a rule, is like the taste for olives, not natural, but acquired. The average banker will tell you that he has not time to be public-spirited. He says that his first duty as he rightly apprehends it is to make dividends for his stockholders, to provide daily bread for his family, and incidentally for himself, and when he has done that and taken a little necessary recreation it is bed time. So he is a good father, a good husband and mindful of his stockholders' interest, but what sort of a citizen is he? He is a citizen in name, when the merchant calls on him to lend a hand he practically says what Felix said to Paul: 'Go thy way for this time; when I have a convenient season I will call on you.' But sooner or later—generally sooner—he learns that private prosperity, the interest of the institutions he represents is conditioned on public prosperity. That as the merchant prospers, so does the banker and that as a general proposition aid extended to the deserving merchant is a good investment that will yield a plentiful harvest. Of course the banker is expected to exercise due care in extending this help. The granting of credit is not unlike the practice of medicine. In practice it involves the application of knowledge based upon experience and observation. There are always present so many possible chances of error that it is quite safe to say that the experienced and careful banker to make a fatal blunder. Nature quickly and kindly punishes an end to the blunders of the medical practitioner, but directors and stockholders are not always so considerate of the mistakes of the banker. It might be worth while then if the banker, when asked by the merchant for credit, would before

HOW TO GET STRONG. P. J. Daly, of 127 W. Congress St., Chicago, tells of a way to become strong. He says: "My mother, who is old and was very feeble, is deriving a mutual benefit from Electric Bitters, that I feel my duty to tell those who need a safe and strengthening medicine about it. In my mother's case a marked result has been realized. Inomnia has been overcome and she is steadily growing stronger." Electric Bitters quickly remedy stomach, liver and kidney complaints. Sold under guarantee at all drug stores.

A SURE-ENOUGH KNOCKER. J. C. Goodwin, of Kelsville, N. C., says: "Buckley's Nerve is a sure-though knocker for dizziness. A bad one came on my leg last summer, but that wonderful nerve tonic quickly removed it. Not even a scar remained." Guaranteed for piles, sores, burns, etc. Sold at all drug stores.

refusing to go to some pains to investigate the worthiness of the applicant I have referred to only one of the many obligations of the banker to the merchant, but to me it stands out as one of the most important. "But what of the obligation of the merchant to the banker? He, too, owes something. As long as the banker extends credit to the merchant, based upon his business prospects the merchant should in confidence keep his banker advised as to his business affairs. Under these conditions the banker not only has the right to such information, but the merchant should take special pride in furnishing such information. The merchant should give prompt attention to all maturing obligations. Nothing helps the merchant with the banker so much as promptness. When you have a paper maturing and are indifferent as to your credit standing just pay no attention to due notices sent you and you will soon know where you stand with your banker. Just as a general conclusion: magnify your vocation as merchants. See that it gets the honor which is its due and recognize it as one of the arts, as it has been called. I wish to express, gentlemen, my hearty thanks for being permitted to be here on this the occasion of your first barbecue."

MR. STONE'S ADDRESS. Mr. C. S. Stone was the last speaker. His subject was: "Keep Your Money at Home." In part he said as follows:

"The subject assigned me, 'Keep Your Money at Home,' touches the keynote of the business situation. We all spend money. Some as soon as we get it, others of us before we get it, at any rate, we all spend it, and most of us spend it all. There might have been a time when it was hard to spend money in Charlotte, but such difficulty presents itself now even to that most interesting animal known to some as the 'light wad.' There are no specimens of that creature here to-day. I am quite sure. Charlotte is proud to every Charlotte who travels. Its retail stores are not excelled in attractiveness and in the matter of complete stocks carried by those in the largest cities of the land. The bargain tables stimulated by artistically got up catalogues occasionally strikes our mothers and sisters and wives, but after a few just comparisons they soon decide to buy where they can see what they are getting and have the benefit of the exchange privilege. I have hardly known of one case in which the Charlotte citizen has not been willing to send money out of Charlotte, but I am reminded of an incident that happened in our store. Most of you know as a matter of accommodation we have had orders, and in that way know about some of the money that is sent out of town. The other day an old gentleman approached the young lady who attends to the typewriter and she almost in a whisper, 'Gimme a money order.' 'How much?' asked the young lady? 'Looking carefully all around him he replied, 'Two gallons.'

INTERESTING CONTEST. Mr. W. S. Dorr was in charge of an exciting evening in which over 20 prizes were offered, each representing products of the Colgate and Company concern. The first prize, three boxes of Octagon soap powder, was won by Mr. J. A. Smith, the second prize, two boxes of the same powder, was won by Mr. W. C. Stickleather; the third prize, one box of the washing powder, was won by Mr. J. W. Cullough, a country merchant. Twenty small prizes, of five packages each, were drawn by city and country merchants, these being Messrs. F. M. Kirby, W. A. Neal, A. H. Byron, B. Griffin, J. C. Hunter, G. H. Hester, J. H. Hester, J. G. Weber, J. F. Boyd, G. A. Stickleather, W. F. Redman, W. Deaton, J. P. Iam, T. C. Jordan, R. T. Martin, J. T. Little, S. L. Hoover, Mrs. S. L. Hoover, and W. T. Henderson. A card was handed to each visitor as he or she entered the grounds, while a duplicate number was retained by the representatives of the company, and the numbers were drawn by a little girl, about 4 o'clock in the afternoon, following the dinner.

An exciting game of baseball was called at 6 o'clock between teams representing the wholesalers and retailers, the latter winning out by a score of 13 to 11. This feature of the day was very much enjoyed, and the teams displayed some genuine baseball talent. There were errors, of course, but likewise some good plays and heavy hitting. Mullis got a couple of triples, with a couple of home runs, his opponents guessing until they landed on him and pounded out a victory. The retailers make bold to say that they are not in any other bout with the same opponents whenever the time is ripe.

DIES IN AUGUSTA. Child of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Senn Taken From Aiken to Augusta For Treatment of Appendicitis, Dies After Operation. Little Harriet Senn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Senn, of this city, died yesterday at Augusta, Ga., following an operation Wednesday for appendicitis. She was five or six years old. The little girl, her mother and her little brother were visiting the parents of her father in Aiken, S. C., when she was taken ill. She was carried to Augusta for treatment. The hospital to which it was supposed to take her was surrounded by water, and under the circumstances practically inaccessible. The operation, therefore, was performed at a private residence. The family was present with the sufferer.

MR. SENN has been a Charlotte resident for about a year and is an employee of the Star music house. Funeral arrangements had not been made last night, but it was presumed the interment would be in Aiken, S. C.

In speaking of the merits of Chickering pianos

it would be easy to ring the changes on their sympathetic, singing tone, their resonance, their brilliancy, their nicely adjusted touch and action, their unique scale, the permanence and elegance of their construction and finish, and so on—

But after all, these are only the essentials of the few really good pianos.

What we claim and can prove, is that these qualities are carried to a higher degree of attainment in the Chickering than in a piano of any other make.

REPUBLICAN CONVENTION.

Local Republicans in County Convention To-Morrow Will Put Candidates in Field For Places on Board of Education—Say Dissatisfaction Over Present Superintendent of Education Exists.

"What are you fellows going to do to-morrow at your county convention?" asked an Observer man of a well-known Republican last night. "Lots," was the rather assuring answer. "I can't say positively, but from what I have heard, we will not content all the offices."

"Why, the Republicans are going to try to get a man or two on the county board of education. You would be surprised to know of the amount of dissatisfaction existing to-day among the Democrats of the county over the present superintendent of education. We have nothing against the present board. It seems to do its work well enough, so far as it has the control, but the people are not satisfied with the superintendent."

"We have assurances from many staunch Democrats that they will give us their votes if we put out capable candidates for this board, and that is what we are going to do. There are many citizens who have not been giving the present board their votes for the last two elections, simply because of the disfavor in which the superintendent is held. If we can elect a board that will give us a Democratic party, that fact alone will not be baffling for the present board, and add the full Republican strength of the county, we can easily elect our candidates."

"How about the legislative ticket?" continued the newspaper man. "It looks now as if only one man would be put in the field for the Legislature. It seems unwise to put out a full ticket at this time."

The same Republican ventured the assertion that the officers of sheriff, treasurer and some of the places on the board of county commissioners would go unchallenged by the Republicans.

Mr. George Dunn Weds Miss Crawford. Mr. George F. Dunn and Miss Mattie Crawford were married Wednesday afternoon at 6 o'clock at the residence of Rev. H. H. Hulten on North Tryon street by him. Immediately after the ceremony Mr. Dunn and his bride left for Raleigh on their wedding trip.

Mr. Dunn, who is originally from the Paw Creek section, has been associated with the Ed Mellon Clothing Company for six years and has many friends in the city. The bride is a Charlotte resident who has also many friends who join in wishing them happiness. She is originally from Raleigh.
