Market. The great bulk of agricultural products is non-perishable if kept under shelter. Of course there is always the danger of fire, but we have that risk covered by insurance for a small cost. Feed the markets on short rations and you will soon see prices boosted by an increased de-mand. Don't let the cry of "big crops" scare you into parting with your products at a price that will not give you a fair and just reward for your labor and the capital that you have invested in your business.

> You don't find men in other callings disposing of products which represent a year's work and interest on their investment, at a price below cost. The farmer has often done this by following the suicidal policy of forcing the market in four months' time, crops which must meet and supply a year's demand. Of course these crops are not to be and will not be consumed in four months. They are bought by the "middle man" and held storage until the demands of the markets call for them at remunerative prices.

We should not quarrel with the 'middle man" as long as he conducts a legitimate buying and selling busi-ness. We should quarrel with ourselves for not handling our own crops for our own benefit in the same business-like way the "middle man" has been handling them for his benefit. If products were not offered for sale on the streets of our towns at whatever price they would bring, the "middle man" would soon go out of business. But as long as we follow the present method of marketing our crops, there will be a legitimate field for the "middle man," and, in fact, he is a necessary part of this mode In the case of the of marketing. cotton crop, which is the principal money crop of the South, we can well believe that a fair margin is made by the men who stand between the producer and the spinner; otherwise there would not be so many "cotton buy-

Now, how are we to get out of these "old ruts" and upon the highway of successful business-like the marketing of our crops? It must be done by extending the selling period throughout the year so that the supply will just keep pace with the demand. If farmers are ever to attain their commercial independence they must raise home supplies and quit buying on credit. I don't know a single farmer who has followed the "all cotton system" and made a success at it.

Mr. Blewett, for whom the falls were named, came to this country from England. He owned 1,100 acres up and down the Pee Dee. His residence, which was in Richmond county, was one of the finest homes in the State, The old house decayed and fell years ago, and there is nothing left to mark the old site but the well.

On the east bank of the river, in the sand, within two hundred yards of the water, is the tomb of the old Englishman. The grave and stones are enclosed in an iron fence, donated by Gen. Stephen D. Lee, who married a granddaughter of Mr. Blewett. An eighth of a mile up stream is the magnificent dam being put in by the Rockingham Power Company, whas its office on the Anson side.

The plant at Blewett Falls, when completed, will be unique in many respects. It will supply between $0,000 and $35,000 horse-power, putting it in the same class with the largest single plant of the Southern Power Company, on the Catawba. The back water from the dam, which is 1,500 feet wide and 59 feet from base 1,500 feet wide and 55 feet from base to top, will make a beautiful lake 7 1-2 miles long and make the river navigable for 33 miles.
