profitable harvest, nothing contribut ed more to the recovery of industry than the coming of the railroads into the markets as large buyers of constructive materials.

The last panis differed from its predecessors in one important respect, in that it occurred at a time when the country was suffering from very in-adequate transportation facilities. This was shown by the enormous is-ene of nearly $1,500,000,000 new railroad securities in spite of its being a point year A portion of this great sum was used for refunding purposes but the bulk went to provide missing the next six months.
