G. ED GATHERING AMMUNITION

Distinguished Author of That Rare Gem, "The Wail," Delves Deep Into the Goods of Nonh Webster Stacking Up Against the Day of Need-A Tip to the Ogdenites, Carnegieites and Other Uplifters.

Written for The Observer,

Dr. G. Ed Flow, who, now that the excitement has passed, is willing that public announcement be made that he is the author of the sublime poem, "The Wail," which appeared in The Observer some months ago, is at present engaged in a careful study of the dictionary for the purpose of enlarging and strengthening his vocabulary As the Joctor's command of the English language is already phenomenal, and seemed to admit of no further extension, your correspond-ent hastened to interview him with reference to this new manoeuvre. Dr. Flow modestly admitted that his ability to clothe his thoughts in elegant and copious language was great enough for any ordinary orator, fled with this ordinary acquisition, as ed by the late Senator John J. Ingalis, whose vocabulary, acquired by constant study of the dictionary, was like an ocean whose wave touched every

The interviewer having suggested that the doctor's vocabulary had already reached the ocean stage, and when taken at the flood had at times rivaled the high tides of the Bay of Fundy, the doctor waved the suggestion saide as of no moment, and picked up his dictionary to immerse himself again in its pages Overcome by the exereme modesty of the student, the interviewer was about to softly away in order not to disturb the quiet and still air of study, when the doctor cast his eyes upon the ceiling and murmured these remarkable "Traumatic neurasthenia; Greek derivatives; traumatic, traumatikes, an adjective derived from the substantive 'trauma,' a wound or injury; neurasthenia, from neuron, a nerve, 'a' or alpha 'privi-Cleveland 200 301 32x-10 13 1 tive, and sthenia, atrength, the whole Chicago 000 003 000-2 4 1 word being equivalent to the English phrase, lack of nerve-strength, or nerve weakness; and the entire expression, 'traumatic neurasthenia,' signifies nerve-weakness caused by a wound or injury." After listening to the foregoing it occurred to the hearer that the Ogden movement for the educational uplift of the benighted South is misdirecting its energies and wasting its money. Here is a man who smites upon the simple, abridged dictionary late Noah Webster, and whole streams of knowledge burst forth. And herein lies a fruitful suggestion to both the New York, May 4-A decisive defeat Ogdenites and the Carnegie Foundation: Let a moderate portion only of the funds now devoted to hot air discourses on the educational needs of the South, and to the building of libraries (which serve principally as monuments to the benefits derived from the tariff on steel by a malefactor of great wealth)-let but a small portion of these funds be devoted to the employment of Dr. Flow to lecture throughout the South on "The Use of the Dictionary as a Means to Completer Knowledge and Higher Education," and let another portion of those funds be expended in placing a dictionary in the hands of every child, and the South will be saved. And, though posterity has never done a single thing for us, posterity, too, will he saved from the blighting breath of ignorance; and the sun of knowledge, ever at its zenith, will cast refulgent rays upon all that section of common country lying south of that parallel of north latitude, which is usually denominated "Mason and Dixon's Line." This subject cannot be abandoned without referring to a collateral issue raised by certain enemies of Dr. the purpose of giving full expression to his thoughts in case President Taft appoints a Democrat to the Federal judgship. The writer is in a position to deny this in toto. No baser calumny was ever uttered against the motives of any man. The doctor is seeking to behold the bright countenance truth, in his own quiet way and for himself primarily, and his ultimate purpose is to bestow the knowledge thus gained upon his friends and neighbors. Those who ascribe to him baser motives should be on their guard, lest they remove themselves from the company of the elect.

PITCHER JOHNNY LUSH, OF THE CARDINALS, WHOSE CURVES ARE PROVING EFFECTIVE

Judging from his present good work in the box, Pitcher Johnny Lush, of the St. Louis Nationals, is out to make many of the crack southpaws in the big leagues look to their laurels. Since the opening of the season Lush has twirled first-class ball, and with Bresnahan behind the bat to help him out there is no doubt that the clever southpaw will make a good record. Lush is not only a crack pitcher, but is a capable field-er and a hard and timely hitter. In a recent game against Chicago, which he won, he made three hits. Lush made his professional debut in 1963 with the Williamsport (Pa.) club as a fielder. He attracted attention, and that fall the Philadelphia club signed him. He started in in 1904 as a southpaw pitcher, but in a short time was used in the cutfield to get the benefit of his excellent batting. In mid-season he was placed on first base, and in a short time he mastered the position so well that he finished the season at the bag. The following season, however, he was used as a pitcher; as Bransfield was secured from the Pittsbug club. He remained with the Phillies until 1997, when he was traded to St. Louis for Pitcher "Buster" Brown. He has since been a useful member of the Cardinals' pitching staff. In 1906 Lush pitched a no hit game against Brooklyn.
