STINGS. Double-beader to-day.

Hard week, this, on baseball, The rain has afforded us time to strengthen without further losses.

A few youngsters are playing this season under the shade of McKevitt's patriarchal band.

If you want to get a cussing, say something, anything will do, against the Winston team.

President Taft has departed these coasts, but His Majesty, Pops McKevitt, rests among us.

Two games from Greensbore would put a mighty good taste in the mouth for the Winston series. It will seem almost like the opening game of the season when hostilities are renewed at length.

It's time for you fellows who have een figuring on Charlotte's losses to turn the other side of the paper.

One of the surprises of the present National league season is the improvement in the playing of "Big Tim" Jordan at first base for the Brooklyn Nationals. In 1907 Jordan was one of the best hitters in the older organization and a fair fielder, but last year his game was below par. "Big Tim's" principal weakness was his inability to handle grounders successfully. Judging by his present playing, he has overcome this fault, as he has been picking them up a is Hal Chase. Jordan made his profession debut with the Senecas of New York in 1899. In 1809 he was a substitute on the Washington Americans. During the season of 1802 he played with the Newark team of the Eastern league and in 1903 with the Nashua club of the New England circuit. In 1904 he became a member of the Baltimore team. He did fine work that year and in 1905 attracted the attention of the Brooklyn club.
