He deliberately delayed the game by walking slowly to the bench, taking a drink of water and sauntering to the plate. His purpose perhaps was to get instructions from the coach, but his manner was inexcusable. # WOMEN FIGHT BILLBOARDS.

Cantabrigia Club Persuades Advertisers to Abandon Them.

New York Sun. A campaign against billboard advertising in Cambridge, Mass., has been begun by the members of the Cantabrigia Club, a women's organization of that city.

At a recent meeting it was voted that the chairman of the civics department write to firms using billboards for advertising purposes certain parts of the city protesting against this manner of destroying the city's beauty and asking their cooperation in an attempt to rid Cambridge of the distasteful nuisance. The letter was as follows:

The Cantabrigia Club, of Cam bridge, with a membership of 500 women, desires to ask if you will be kind enough to co-operate with it in its effort to preserve the beauty and attractiveness of Cambridge by discontinuing the use of billboards for the purpose of advertising your goods when your present contract expires. We beg to assure you that this form of advertising is particularly distasteful to our citizens and we sincerely believe that it will be a good business move for you to put your advertising into some other form. Hoping we may have your help in this our effort to save the beauty of our city, and that we may hear from you as to your views on the matter, etc.

The response to this appeal, says The Fourth Estate, has been sur-prisingly large and uniformly uniformly courteous. In every case has the de sire for co-operation been evident. Of twenty letters received nine advertisers have offered unconditionally to withdraw from the billboards and five have promised to do so on the ondition that the club can persuade others to discontinue this mode of advertisement.
