RALEIGH : FRIDAN, FEB. 12, 1864.

Congress .- We have no information as to the passage of bills in relation to the currency, exemptions, or the principals of substitutes, or the suspension of habeas corpus. These measures are no doubt under discussion in secret session, and the result must soon be known, as the term of the present Congress will expire on Wednesday next. The new Congress will assemble on the first Monday in May.

MEETING IN GREENVILLE .- We are requested to state that a meeting of the citizens of Pitt County will be held in Greenville, on Saturday the 13th instant.

A fire occurred in Wilmington on the night of the 9th instant, and one thousand and twenty-five bales of cotton were consumed. Loss seven hundred thousand dollars.

The steamer Spunkie was ashore below Wilmington, under the guns of Fort Caswell. The cargo will be principally saved, but the vessel lost.

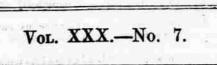

We are requested by Mr. S. O. Deaver, County Agent for Madison, to state that he has succeeded in his late visit to Raleigh in procuring flour and cotton cards for the families of soldiers and others in Madison, and that they will be delivered as soon as practicable.

It will be seen in our paper to-day, that Hon. Nathaniel Boyden is nominated by his friends as a candidate in Rowan and Davie, to fill the seat in the Senate made vacant by the resignation of Dr. Ramsay. The people of these two Counties could have no more faithful or efficient representative in the Senate than Mr. Boyden. He is a fast friend to liberty and the people.

The Fayetteville Observer refuses to publish Mr. Reade's remarks in vindication of this State, delivered in the Senate on the 30th January. It publishes the resolutions offered by Mr. Reade, but does not even state the fact that he accompanied them with remarks. Another evidence that the Observer has gone over bag and baggage to the Destructives.

29TH N. C. TROOPS .- A member of this regiment writes us as follows from Meridian, Mississippi :

"Our men like your paper, and I expect to send you a larger list when they are paid off. Our men have for the most part re-enlisted, and are deter-

Hoarding-Production.

Hoarding is to be expected in all revolutions .-

Grain, and meat, and the precious metals are always put away and sparingly used in times of scarcity

and danger. This country was never so poor as it is now in meat and breadstuffs, but still we believe that there is more of these articles on hand than is supposed. Too many of our people are disinclined to sell for Confederate money. They say they have as much of this money already as they want, and the time has gone by when they could invest it in lands and perfectly safe stocks, and hence they are unwilling to receive it for articles of prime necessity; but just try gold, or Bank notes, or even State

treasury notes and see if the person who had nothing to spare when you spoke of paying in Confederate

currency, does not admit, after all, that he can spare

you some corn and a little bacon. Now, it is useless to get in a passion and abuse the hoarder or the holder of these articles for not being willing to exchange them for current funds; for in the first place, he acts in accordance with the ordinary promptings of human selfishness, and in the second place, abuse will only irritate him and make him hold the tighter to his corn and meat. Not merely the price of labor, but labor itself is so uncertain,

and the means relied on for agricultural production

are so scarce and dear, that it is not a matter for great surprise to see the farmers holding on to their produce with so tight a grasp; and when to this

we add the fact that the tithing law and the im pressment law have to be satisfied-the latter as often, frequently, as the government officer may think proper to resort to the we are inclined to con-

those who conject in and that the farmers for such conduct would pursue the same course themselves

if they were in their places. The buyer complains of prices as they continue to get higher, while the seller affirms, as an excuse for the advance in price,

that Confederate money is rapidly going down in

But the quantity produced docs not depend altogether on the means of producing in order to stimulate production by it where a solution of the order to quired by those immediately aged in it, there must be, first, a many for a surplus, and second-ly, an assurance that the producer will be permitted to sell the surplus. We have a home market, it is true, but the seller is embarrassed by the character of the currency he is expected to receive ;

and then he has no assurance, as long as the im

pressment laws exist, and as long as roving bands

HABEAS CORPUS-ABBITBARY POWER -We COPY the following strong article from the Richmond Ezariner of Tuesday last:

"Arrest on mere suspicion has always been regarded as the most odious exertion of arbitrary power. The practice has produced more revolution than it has ever repressed The British race have regarded it with more bitter and implacable abhorrence than any other branch of the human family. For two centuries half of English history is occu-pied with the cardinal theme of habeas corpus. On this matter hinged the most bloody and destructive civil war that ever cursed the land from which this eople sprang. Arbitrary imprisonment may quiet nissive populations of continental Europe, and effectually serve the despotic purposes of a Romanoff or Buonaparte ; but among the country. men of Hampden and their descendants they have been fruitful only of bloody outbreak and implacable civil dissension. They are in conflict with our traditions and education. They are offensive to all our historic ideas, and repulsive to the just price we cherish in our institutions and descent. The minds of our people are inflamed on the topic of personal liberty-inflamed by several centuries of animated history; and the suspension of habeas cor-pus would excite the very disorder it is intended to prevent.

We are compelled by an irresistible conviction of duty to protest against a suspension of this writ. The ends designed to be attained by such a measure can be reached by other means. It is said to be aimed et secret treason in special localities. Let the laws against treason be amended to embrace the new and concealed phases of the crime; and let a change of venue be allowed at the discretion of government. The measure is said to be necessary for the suppression of straggling. Let stragglers be tried summarily before an impromptu court, composed of any three commissioned officers nearest the place of apprehension, and condemned and shot on the instant of conviction. Some measure of this clude, while deprece she the disposition to hoard any thing which tister cople generally ought to have the benefit of, at f 'r prices in current funds, that sort would put an end to real straggling, which is the evil complained of.

The mere fact of reposing arbitrary power, against which our people have a traditional repugnance, in the hands of the Executive, would do ten-fold more harm than it would cure. And in this case we have the additional apprehension that the power would not be used to public advantage, but abused to purposes of personal malignancy. It is a mourn-ful fact, placed beyond doubt by conspicuous evi-dence, that the Executive is capable of employing the great powers of Government for the unworthy gratification of animosity. There is not one man in every hundred citizens of the Confederacy who does not entertain this opinion. The measure itself is repugnant to the minds and feelings of the people, and this repugnance is strengthened by a general apprehension that the power of arbitrary arrest would not be employed for the public good, but abused to private injury. Bold, insolent, dangerous Unionists would remain unmolested, and zealous secessionists, intent for the good of the cause upon holding government to its duties, would be the victims of official passion.

Even if this grant of arbitrary power were even so wise in itself, under all the circumstances of the hour, and even if our people had not been educated in an inveterate repugnance to these despotic arrests : still, what good would come of the grant Some of the wisest legislation of our statute books is a dead letter from the refusal or incapacity of the Executive to put it in force; and how often has it been the case that the best legislation has been perverted to the worst purposes -purposes wholly aside from the intentions of Congress ? Who will undertake to guaranty that this power of arbitrary imprisonment will be exercised for the purposes contemplated by Congress in granting it? We trust the Examiner has done the President unintentional injustice in saying that he has employed. or would employ his power to gratify his personal malignancy. Surely, surely Mr. Davis would not do that. If we believed so we should despair of the Republic.

Address of the President to the Army. The following is the address of the President to the army :

Soldiers of the Armies of the Confederate States : In the long and bloody war in which your country is engaged, you have achieved many noble triumphs. You have won glorious victories over vastly more numerous hosts. You have cheerfully borne privations and toil to which you were unused. You have readily submitted to restraints upon your individual will, that the citizen might better perform his duty to the State as a soldier. To all these you have lately added another triumph, the noblest of human conquests-a victory over yourselves.

As the time drew near when you who first entered the service might well have been expected to clann relief from your arduous labors and restoraonly the call of your suffering country. Again you some to tender your service for the public defence free offering which only such patriotism as other could make-a triumph worthy of you and

I would in vain attempt adequately to express the emotions with which I received the testimonials of confidence and regard which you have recently addressed to me. To some of those first received, separate acknowledgments were returned. But it is now apparent that a like generous enthusiasm pervades the whole army, and that the only exception to such magnanimous tender will be of those who, having originally entered for the war, cannot display anew their zeal in the public service. It is, therefore, deemed appropriate, and it is hoped, will be equally acceptable, to make a general acknowledgment, instead of successive special responses. Would that it were possible to render my thanks to you in person, and in the name of our common country, as well as in my own, while pressing the hand of each war-worn veteran, to recognize his title to our love, gratitude, and admiration. Soldiers! By your will (for you and the people are but one,) I have been placed in a position which debars me from sharing your dangers, your suffer-ings, and your privations in the field. With prido and affection my heart has accompanied you in every march; with solicitude it has sought to minister to your every want; with exultation it has marked your every heroic achievement. Yet, never in the toilsome march, nor in the weary watch, nor in the desperate assault, have you rendered a service so decisive in results as in this last display of the high est qualities of devotion and self secrifice which can adorn the character of the warrior-patriot.

act of the Legislature are also general-" All justices Already the pulse of the whole people beats in of the peace, &c., constables who gave bonds pre-vious to the 11th May, 1863," &c. unison with yours. Already they compare your spontaneous and unanimous offer of your lives, for the defence of your country, with the halting and reluctant service of the mercenaries who are purchased by the enemy at the price of higher bounin the military service. If such was the intention, ties than have hitherto been known in war. Animated by this contrast, they exhibit cheerful confidence and more resolute bearing. Even the mur-murs of the weak and timid, who shrink from the trials which make stronger and firmer your noble natures, are shamed into silence by the spectacle which you present. Your brave battle-cry will ring loud and clear through the land of the enemy, said that the word "exempted" is restricted in its as well as our own ; will silence the vainglorious meaning to persons who are not in the military service, and "discharged" is the proper word, boastings of their corrupt partisans and their pensioned press; and will do justice to the calumny by which they seek to persuade a deluded people that you are ready to purchase dishonorable safety by degrading submission. Soldiers! The coming spring campaign will open under auspices well calculated to sustain your hopes. Your resolution needed nothing to fortify it. With sauks represented under the influence of your ea-ample, and by the aid of your representatives, who give earnest of their purpose to add, by legislation, largely to your strength, you may welcome the in-vader with a confidence justified by the memory of past victories. Un the other hand, debt, taxation, repetition of heavy drafts, dissension, occasioned by the strife for power, by the pursuit of the spoils of office, by the thirst for the plunder of the public treasury; and above all, the consciousness of a bad cause, must tell with fearful force upon the overstrained energies of the enemy. His campaign in 1864, must from the exhaustion of his resources both in men and money, be far less formidable than these of the last two years, when unimpaired means were used with boundless prodigality, and with results which are suggested by the mention of the glorious names of Shiloh and Perrysville, and Murfreesboro' and Chickamauga, and the Chickahominy, and Manassas, and Fredericksburg, and Chancellors Soldiers! Assured success awaits us in our holy struggle for liberty and independence, and for the preservation of all that renders life desirable to honorable men. When that success shall be reached, to you, your country's hope and prude, under Divine Providence, will it be due. The fruits of that success will not be reaped by you alone; but your children, and your children's children in long generations to come, will enjoy blessings derived from you that will preserve your memory ever living in their hearts. Citizens defenders of the homes, the liberties, and the altars of the Confederacy 1 That the God whom we all humbly worship may shield you with his Fatherly care, and preserve you for safe return to the peaceful enjoyment of your friends and the association of those you most love, is the earnest prayer of your Commander in Chief. JEFFERSON DAVIS.

Bradshaw be forthwith discharged, with late w wherever he will; the costs to be taxed by the cle of the Superior Court of Alamance county will be paid by W. A. Albright. The clerk will file the R. M. PEARSON, C. J. Supreme Court. At Richmond Hill, Feb. 8, 1864.

For the Stendard.

MR. HOLDEN :- As one of the incidents of the day and the times, permit me to inform the government through your columns, if it will be informed, of the whereabouts and doings of one of its cavalry brigades. Congress appears to be greatly concerned to raise an army-or I should rather say to increase our already large force, and believing the brigade to which I allude may, in the opinion of the President and the Secretary of War, be lost or mislaid, I hereby give notice to all whom it may concern, that Gen. Hodges' brigade of Kentucky cavalry has been found. The other day our quiet valley of the Yadkin, in Caldwell county, was startled by the martial sound of the bugle and heavy tramp of war horses, accompanied by artillery and all the appendages of "grim visaged war." I learn that Gen. Hodge has been marching some thirty or forty days through Georgia, South Carolina, and North-Carolina, in order to reach some point where the enemy may be found, and that it is probable he will reach his destination some time during the present year.

Your correspondent had the honor of an introduction to General Hodge and staff. The General appears to be a very proper, nice gentlemen, and his staff likewise; of their achievements the writer is not prepared to speak, never having seen or heard of either of the gentlemen as warriors before, but if I were allowed to judge of the General's predominant trait, I would say he is fully impressed with his own greatness and power; and of his command I would say of them as Fallstaff said of his motly crew, "many of them are proper food for powder," while others appear all that soldiers should be, and his command, taken as a whole, are certainly fine looking men. There is another class of men connected with Gen. Hodge's command that might esteem it invidious in the writer, were they not noticed in this communication, therefore I take great pleasure in commending them to Secretary Memminger, for their financial ability in the pecuniary affairs of the Confederacy, and hope that Mr. Meminger will not overlook the claim of Quartermaster Hall, and his subordinates, to promotion for their ability and tact in aid to the Treasury department ; and as these gentlemen may feel a delicacy in speaking for themselves, I deem it not improper to speak for them, and trust my motives will be duly appreciated in their behalf.

If 1 am not mistaken, Mr. Editor, the Congress of the Confederate States enacted a law appointing a Commissioner of Appraisement for North Carolina, and the prices fixed by them for all articles needed for the government should be paid by its agents when taken from the citizens for the use of the army.

The Commissioners appointed for the purpose have performed their duty and published a schedule of prices. Corn is put at five dollars per bushel. Still, Mr. Quartermaster Hall, and his subordinates, with the schedule before their eyes, refuse to pay the citizen what the government agents say they shall receive for their produce. Gen. llodge's brigade encamped one night in the writer's neighborhood, and it is within his knowledge that Quartermaster Hall and his agents paid one man three dollars and sixty cents, another man two dollars and fifty cents, and a third man they allowed only two dollars per bushel for corn. I believe they allowed the schedule price for fodder. When asked the reason for not paying the schedule price for corn, which is five dollars per bushel, they said, when they went to settle with the War Department they were only allowed a certain sum, and all excess they paid over would be charged against them ; that the Department would not allow them five dollars per bushel. If that were true, of course no one would desire these gentlemen to sustain any individual loss; but I ask them, and I ask you, Mr. Editor, if it is true? I believe it is not trueif I am mistaken, I am sorry to do them the slightest injustice. Why do these Quartermasters and their agents request men of whom they buy forage and fond, to sign blank receipts as to quantity and price, if it is not to afford them a margin to speculate on the government? And is it not probable Mr. Quartermaster Hall will charge the schedule price for corn, and pocket the nett gain bimself? But, Mr. Editor, let us suppose them to be honest and fair with the government-it brings me back to the original point made in this article, to wit : that Mr. Quartermaster Hall ought to be promoted for his acility in relieving the Treasury of Mr. Secretary Meminger, and I prove his claim thus: Owing to the scarcity of grain in many portions of this State, the tithe or tax in kind has been remitted, and money taken in its stead. Such is the case in this district. The Confederate tax collector charges the people five dollars per bushel for corn, and the man is glad to be allowed to pay his tenth in money, and keep his grain. Then comes along some brig-ade of the army-they have to be fed. Mr. Quartermaster seizes your corn, though it may be needed to keep the poor from want and hunger; and instead of paying you the government price, as all have a right to demand, he tells you, no—the War Department authorises him to pay you only two dollars and fifty cents per bushel. See what a nice operation it is for the government; you pay the government five dollars, and the government phys you two dollars and fifty cents-a clear profit" to the government of one hundred per cent; but, alas! I fear Mr. Secretary Memmuger never realizes the profit. Mr. Quartermaster holds the trump cards in his own hands, and plays them well. Then, how nice and fair it works amongst neighbors and communities; Mr. A lives on the pul road and has barely corn sufficient to sustain his family, it is seized by army officers, and he receives, say two dollars and fifty cents per bushel. Mr. B lives a mile or so off the road on an adjoining farm, he has corn to sell, which he is selling to soldiers' families at from eight to ten dollars a bushel. Mr. A is forced to pay first to the government the difference between two dollars and fifty cents, and five dollars then he has to pay Mr. B, say ten dollars a bushel. Mr. A loses in the operation just seven dollars and fifty cents on the bushel for bread to sustain his family, while Mr. B makes five dollars clear profit out of government corn, which he has been allowed to retain. Mr. Editor, it is an old saying, that "beauty is as beauty does;" no wonder so many people that have done all in their power to sustain a government in whose army they have sons, brothers and friends, are ready to exclaim, is this my countrythis the justice and humanity we are to expect from our rulers-or is it not more properly so to speak, the winning ways of a reckless party to lure the people on to have less confidence in our laws, our YADKIN overnment and our rulers ? WHOLE NUMBER 1510.

In the Matter of Bradshaw.

In March, 1863, the petitioner, being elected a constable, was duly qualified and entered upon the discharge of the duties of his office. In April, 1863, he was sent to the camp of instruction as a con script; on the 5th of May, 1863, he was sent to the army where he served about six weeks. On joining the army, he received bounty, but has never received any pay; he came home on furlough until his case could be decided. A correspondence was had between Gov. Vance and the Confederate authorities, which need not be set forth. On the 15th

January, 1864, he sued out a writ of habeas corpus.

May 1, 1863, Congress enacted, " In addition to the State officers exempted by the act 1st October, deprive one of a public office ; it may because of for-the act of Congress, and the claim that Gov. Vance made in pursuance thereof, and the act of the Legislature, embrace the case of a constable who was, at the date of the claim of the Governor, in the military service of the Confederate States; or is the ex emption confined to constables who were not in military service? The words of the act of Congress are general : "There shall be exempted all State officers whom the Governor of any State may claim."

We learn that the wheat, which was somewhat injured by the cold weather some weeks since, is now suffering for the want of rain. The open weather which we have had for a week or two past, has enabled the farmers to break 39 their land for corn in good time. We trust that the fear of tithes and impressments will not dishearten the farmers, but that they will cultivate as much land as practicable, and raise all they can. The wheat crop, if it should turn out wall, may suffice until corn-gathering time, but it will be our main dependence from June until October. Every ear of corn that can be produced will be needed. As for meat, that will be a luxury, as sugar and coffee formerly were, by the first of August.

Outrages by the Military.

We continue to receive letters from citizens and the wives of soldiers, complaining in the most earnest terms of depredations committed by roving bands of soldiers in the Western part of this State. We publish to day a communication over the signature of Yadkin, from one of the most reliable citizens of Caldwell County, describing the depredations and injuries inflicted by Gen. Hodges' cavalry brigade in that section. We learn that a portion of that brigade also visited Wilkes County, and scourged the people terribly, especially in the Trap Hill neighborhood. Similar outrages have occurred in nearly all the Western Counties. The people of that region, comparatively unarmed and defenceless, are at the mercy of those roving bands, for the most part from other States. The cavalry horses of Hodges' brigade are said to be very poor-so poor as to be absolutely unfit for service, and but few of them, if well fed, would be of any use in making a crop. Such brigades ought to be dismounted, the horses sold, and the men placed in the ranks as infantry. At present, they are doing infinitely more harm than good.

The Confederate thinks that the resolution of thanks in the Senate to our troops for re-enlisting. "came very inappropriately from Mr. Reade." The very reverse is the fact. Three fourths of the rank and file of our troops are Conservatives. They are fighting the battles, while many of the fire eaters who labored to bring on the war, are in anug places at home, growing rich out of the war. It was peculiarly appropriate that Mr. Reade, an old Union man but now true Confederate, should offer words of encouragement and commendation to the sons and brothers of his constituents who have staked every thing on the war, and who only ask, while those sons and brothers continue to fight, that suitable steps should be taken to open negotiations .-Mr. Reade, of all others, was the very man to offer the resolutions referred to.

One of the effects of the suspension of habeas onrpus would most probably be the temporary extinction of the Conservative press. An Editor with a proper conception of his responsibilities and duties in a country like this, will not speak at all unless permitted to speak freely and boldly. But the suspension will afford a harvest and a season of rejoicing to the supple and unscrupulous tools of arbitrary power. They will exult while the people will mourn.

The labored attack of the Confederate on Mr. Senator Reade will glance innocuous from the securely mailed reputation of that gentleman. Mr. Reade has spoken for his State among his peers in the Senate, as no other member from North Carolina has spoken since the government was founded .-He has uttered the voice of his State, and we have reason to believe that that voice will be respected by those in high places much more than at any for-and cattle, and hogs, that he will be permitted to retain and sell his surplus to the best advantage. These things, we fear, will operate to restrict production during the present year. Producers will be disposed to make only enough for themselves. It is a sad reflection that the condition of the country and the laws of the country are such as not to incline its citizens to exert themselves industriously to add to the means of living.

Nothing would gratify us more than to see a feeling of confidence among our peop would lead them to receive the currency v for what they can spare from their own families, and to see a liberal distribution of the means of living, by sale or exchange, instead of the system of hoarding that now prevails. Such a feeling would not only encourage our brave troops in the field, but it would produce greater unity and harmony at home, and lay the foundations of renewed hope for the final triumph of the Southern cause.

A writer in the Henderson Times, over the signature of Junius, charges that the Editor of this paper has gotten up the Convention movement in this State with the view to defeat the re-election of Gov. Vance. The charge is utterly without foundation. Junius has no proof of it, but proceeds merely on suspicion. Does any sane person think it possele that one feeble individual in Raleigh could start and sustain a movement which would control the State and decide its elections ? What nonsense! No, Mr. Junius, the movement is the people's, and we are simply one of their organs. That is all. But how is it possible to defeat Gov. Vance, if he will do as Junius says he will, "bow deferentially" to the will of the people ? The people make Governors and Congressmen, and the people unmake them. Public men stand or fall to the people ; and each one must judge for himself as to what the people wish and what they do not wish.

Junius charges that we are in favor of repealing the Ordinance by which North-Carolina withdrew from the Union, and that we are in favor of a Convention for that purpose. Junius reads the Standard, and he knows there is no foundation for this charge. It exists only in his excitable and very uncertain in _____ ation.

Junius also says that we started the petitions now in circulation in the Western part of the State, and which are being signed by thousands, urging the Governor to convene the Legislaturo. At fault again. This plan of embodying public opinion originated with the people, and not with us. We thick it a good plan-better, perhaps, than public meetings-but we are not entitled to the credit of it. But Junius shows his respect for the people by assuming that many of them will sign these petitions without knowing what they mcan. Junius talks like an oligarch, but he is, after all, only one of the instruments of the oligarchs.

We think we know who Junius is. We advise him to "keep his breath to cool his porridge." He is one of the most unreliable politicians in the mountain country. He seeks to add to his consequence. and to injure us, by attaching himself to Gov. Vance. In this he will fail. We advise him to subside until a more suitable occasion presents itself for the exhibition of his talents

INFORTANT DECISION EXPECTED. - We learn that an important case is now pending before Judge Pearson, upon a writ of habeas corpus contesting the constitutionality of the act of Congress demand-ing service of principals who have furnished substitutes. We are informed that this case will be argued in the Courthouse at Salisbury on Friday the 19th of this month, by able Counsel on both sides, and as the other associate Justices of the Supreme Court are invited and expected to attend, we may confidently expect able and elaborate arguments, to be followed with a final decision, now highest known to the law, from a full Bench; which we trust may be cheerfully submitted to and acquiesmer period. "A word fitly spoken is like apples of ced in, by all upon this at present much vexed ques-gold in pictures of silver."

Letter from France.

A gentleman of this City, says the Confederate, has favored us with the following extract of a letter from a gentleman in Paris, whose opportunities for information are believed to be of such a character as that his statements may be relied on implicitly PABIS, November 27, 1863.

* * * * "Nothing is to be expected from Europe. Neither France nor England will recognize the Confederate States until the Yankees themselves have partially given up the contest. On this point there ought to be delusion in the South. England is endeavoring to build up her own cotton culture, in consequence of the war, and Lord Palmerston's ministry cannot afford to lose the support of the Radicals. These two motives will hold England in her one sided neutrality if the war should last ten years, and that too notwithstanding the sympathies of the nation at large are warmly enlisted on our side. As for France, the Emperor has practically made an agreement with Lincoln, that it he (Lin coln) will say nothing about Mexico, Napoleon will not interfere with his war upon the South. This is the "quid pro quo," while Napoleon feels himself too dangerously situated with reference to the threatering complications of European politics to risk in-curring, at the present moment, the least anxiety over the water.

I have no doubt that the Emperor thinks he made a mistake at the beginning, in making his policy towards the Confederate States depend upon that of England, and in acknowledging the efficiency of the blockade; but having taken that position, he is unable, under present circumstances, to retire from it. It would be too, an unpopular change of pro-gramme, for the French, unlike the English, either take no interest in the war, or if they do, are demented on the subject of slavery. The cry "E. clazagiste!" will frighten any public man or newspaper from edvocacy of the cause. It is only the government organs that speak favorably or even impartially of the South. This ought to be understood, for it is important. The South must fight this war out entirely alone, without even moral support in most quarters; and with God's help she will nobly accomplish the task. Apart from the unwillingness of European governments to make any move towards recognition, (and this is all that is asked of them,) they are too much occupied with the affairs of Europe.

The Polish question and the Schleswig Holstein are both unsettled, and both pregnant with mischief. Either may bring on a general war on the Rhine, the Elbe or the Vistula, while Italy would avail herself of the first disturbance to strike for Venice and Rome. The proposed Congress can rope, to explain the persistent inaction of France with reference to the Confederate States."

DEATH OF HON. JAMES B. CLAY .- A telegram from Moatreal announces the death of Hon James B. Clay, ex-minister to Portugal and ex member of Congress from the Ashland district, Kentucky.

Mr. Clay was the son of Hon. Henry Clay, was born in 1827, and inherited his father's estate, on which he lived, with his mother, until the breaking out of the war. Mr. Clay took the Southern side very warmly, and was arrested by the Lincoln au-thorities. He subsequently effected his exit from the country, and lived in exile in Canada until his

The 28th N. O. regiment has re-enlisted for the war. The 28th was the first volunteer regiment that re organized for three years or the war, and is now the the first regiment in the brigade to which it belongs to re enlist for the war. It is the largest regiment in the army of Northern Virginia, and has been in all the skirmishes and battles.

Richmond, Feb. 9th, 1864.

ESCAPE OF PRISONERS .-- One hundred and nine ficers, including Col. Straight, escaped from the Libby prison, in Richmond, on the night of the 9th, through a tunnel sixty feet long, opening into a vacant lot on the opposite side of the street. No blame is attached to the sentinels. Only one officer was recaptured.

NORTH CAROLINA SOLDIERS IN THE ARMY OF NORTHERN VIRGINIA .- A correspondent of the Bibli: cal Recorder of this City, says:

"An examination of the statistics of the two army corps of Lieut. Gens. A. P. Hill and R. S Ewel disclose the following facts so creditable to the State of North Carolina, that I forward them to you for publication.

Nine States are represented in these two corps, by infantry regiments : Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolic., Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Tennes see and Florida, yet very near onethird of the whole are from North Carolina.

North Carolina has in these two corps eleven regiments of infansry more than Virginia, eight times as nany as South Carolina lacking one; three more than twice as many as Georgia; thirteen times as many as Florida; three and a half times as many as Alabama; five and four seventh times as many as Mississippi ; four and one third times as many as Louisiana ; and thirt sen times as many as Tennessee.

Surely our soldiers have just cause of complaint when their State is ignored in the newspaper accounts of great battle s; and, with these facts before us, it is not difficult to see why so many wounded North Carolinians as a found in the Richmond hospitals after every im, wrtant engagement."

The only cheap art icle going, says the Petersburg Register, is advice. There is any quantity of it in the market, but only a slack demand.

USES OF THE ELDF & BUSH .- The common elder bush of our country i sa grate safeguard against the devastations of insec ta. If any one will notice, it will be found that in sects never touch elder! The leaves of elder s stt red over cabba ges, cucumbers, squashes and other plants subject 'o the ravages of insects, effectually shield them. when referring to persons who are in the military service. This distinction may obtain in military circles, but the word "to exempt" is not a technical term; it is a plain English word, and means literally "to take out of or from," and its ordinary signification is " to free from, not be subject to any service or burthen to which others are made as to exempt from military service, to exempt from taxation; and it is a settled rule of con structict:, words in a statute are to be construed according to their ordinary meaning, unless there is something to show they are used in a different sense. The Courts cannot expect Congress to take notice of the military parlance, and require, in or der to express the intention that all the State off cers whom the Governor may claim as necessary. &c., shall be free from military service, that this particular mode of expression shall be adopted, to wit : " All State officers not in the military service shall be exempted, and all who are in the military service shall be discharged, when the Governor may claim as necessary," &c. The meaning as expressed by the act of Congress to exempt all State officers, is clear; and the words used to express the intention are appropriate according to their well known signification. It was further suggested that, from the nature of the subject, the act should be so coastrued as not to embrace State officers who are in the military ser vice; and it is assumed that Congress did not intend to take any one out of the army. There is the same reason to assume that Congress did not intend to keep any one out of the army! It may be said on the other side the power of Congress to conscript was seriously questioned, and especially its power to conscript State officers who were necessary for the due administration of the government and the laws thereof, and this extended exemption was a concession designed to avoid all conflict with the States, and the use of the peculiar words "whom the Governor of any State may claim to have exempted" countenances this idea. But these are conjectures on political questions into which the Courts are not at liberty to enter.

The cases of Irwin, Marony and Bryan, in which it is held that the conscription acts do not embrace persons already in service, and the cases of Guyer and others, in which it is said that the exemption act of the 11th of October, 1863, did not embrace mechanics between 18 and 85 who were already in service, may seem at first blush to oppose the conclusion to which I have arrived; but upon examination, these cases will be found negatively to support it. The general words of the conscription acts embrace all white males between 18 and 35 and between 35 and 45, and it is only by a reference to the nature of the subject and the context, that persons already in service were excluded. The nature of the subject; for there was no occasion to conscript persons in service for three years or the war. they were soldiers already. The context; for the provision as to camps of instruction, calling the-men into service at different times, &c., were not applicable to persons already in service.

So the general words of the exemption act of 11th ctober, 1862, embraced all shoemakers, black-October. smiths, &c., and it is only from the context that shoemakers, blacksmiths, &c., already in service were excluded. They were required to be "actually employed in their respective trades at the time," which, in reference to those between 18 and 35, was held to be at the passage of the act, in order to fit it to the conscription act of April, 1562; and in reference to those between 35 and 45 or who afterwaids come to the age of 18, "at the time" is taken to mean when called into eervice; and this actual employment in their respective trades could have no application to men who were in the military service and so could not be actually employed at their trades.

But in our case we have seen there is nothing in the subject matter which the courts can judicially take notice of, and there is nothing in the context to controi the general words, so as to exclude State officers who may be in the military service, supposing the position to be correct, of which there can be na doubt, that being in the military service does not per se deprive one of his office.

My conclusion is also supported by the decision of Judge Haliburton of the District Court of the Confederate States, in the matter of Lane, where it is held that a soldier, who becomes a mail contractor, is embraced by the act of Oongress of 17th April, 863, and is exempted from military service. And by the decision of Judge Meredith, in the matter of Brooking (which I noticed, briefly referred to in a uewspaper) where it is teld that a soldier, who, while in the service, was elected a Justice of the Peace and regularly qualified as such, is exempted. It is thereupon considered by me that Joseph Department last night : "ORANGE COURT HOUSE, February 8.

General S. Comper, Adjutant General : The forces of the enemy which crossed at Morton's Ford on Saturday, were driven to the river under cover of their guns. That evening or during the night, they re crossed to the north bank, but remained in position yesterday. This morning they have disappeared. They left seventeen dead and forty six prisoners in our hands.

Our loss was four killed and twenty wounded. The guard at the ford, a lieutenant and twenty-five men, while bravely resisting the passage of the enemy, were captured. The enemy's cavalry, which appeared at Barnett's on Saturday, retired across Robinson river on Sun-B. E. LEE, General." day evening.

day evening. R. E. LEE, General. Thé movement of the enemy appears to have been no more important than a feins or reconnois-sance. Recent Northern papers mention that Meade is still in Philadelphia ; and it is altogether improbable that the enemy's force in Northern Virginia contemplate any serious advance in the absence of their compander. - Rich.
