Old Soldier Wants Office. In announcing myself a candidate for Register of Deeds for Burke county I don't think it is a political office, and when I ask the people to support me at the ballot box I don't ask them to sacrifice any duty they owe to the county or their fellow man. I do not want to contend with any party for that office, for I will serve all alike if I get the office, and like to feel kindly towards all men in getting the office. I want to tear down no government nor hurt no party. I will only beg the people for their support for my own good, and I am sure I will appreciate their help as much as any man could, and do my am in the race to stay.

Yours truly J. F. BATTLE.

FOR THE LITTLE ONES.

The Dangerous "Just For Now" That Some Children Have.

Many young people form habits which cripple and handicap them for life by doing things "just for now," says Success. They let things drop wherever they happen to be "just for now," thinking that they will put the book, the tool, the letter or the article of clothing later where it belongs.

When these young people grow up to manhood and womanhood, they find that the habit of putting things down anywhere "just for now" has become a tyrant that fills their lives with confusion and dis-

It takes no more time or effort to put a thing where it belongs in the first place than it does later, perhaps less, and the chances are that if you do not do so at the proper time you never will. Even if it costs you a little inconvenience at the moment to put everything in its proper place, to do everything at the proper time, the orderly and methodical habits which you cultivate in this way will increase your power and usefulness a hundredfold and may save you much trouble and mortification in the future.

A Pretty Incident. When President McKinley was at the Omaha exposition, a little girl with tawny hair slipped under the rope in the Manufactures building, and before a policeman could catch her she lisped, "Mr. McKinley, won't you please wear my rose in your buttonhole?" The president stopped and smiled and said: "Certainly, my dear. I will exchange with you." And, taking from the lapel of his coat the carnation that he always wore, he gave it to the little maid and put the rose in its place. Then the procession of cabinet ministers, diplomats, governors, senators, generals and other dignitaries, who were wondering at the cause of the interruption, was allowed to pass on .- Primary Edu-

A Scientific Toy. It is not difficult to make a parachute of paper, as any umbrella can be taken as a model. But how can we get an apparatus by the means of which the parachute is carried into the air and opened? Let us proceed as follows: Suppose we have succeeded in making a paper parachute. We didn't use whalebone or wire, but thin pieces of card extending a good bit over the edge of the parachute and fastened with their ends to a smooth wooden ring. This wooden ring is pulled over the stick of the parachute and moves smoothly up and down. A bone button with a groove for a broad rubber band is fastened to the end of the parachute stick.

We get a paper mailing tube open at both ends and just wide enough to allow the parachute to slip in when folded together. On the low-er end of the tube we fasten a strong piece of rubber band on both sides of the opening. We insert the parachute into the tube and place the bone button with its groove on the rubber band. Then, holding the tube with one hand, we pull the bone button, with the other stretching the rubber band. Then we let go, and the parachute shoots out of the tube like an arrow, reaches a considerable height, opens and then comes slowly down.

CONDENSED STORIES.

Wanted the Senator to Prevent the Crowning Outrage.

Senator Platt of Connecticut had a caller one day in May last at his hotel in Washington. An elderly and dignified man sent up his card, and the senator came down to see him. The senator was familiar with the man by name, but had never met him. They chatted for a few moments on various topics. Then the visitor said:

"Senator, you are from my state, and I come to you to see about a matter of the greatest importance. You can prevent the crowning outrage in the history of the world." The man had been talking sane-

y before that, and Senator Platt looked at him curiously and said: "How can I be of such service to The man brought out a portfolio of papers and took from it a wax impression of a seal used on the diplomas granted by the Centennial exposition at Philadelphia and an old Egyptian coin. He held them out to the senator. "Here," he said, "are the two proofs that show that my ten-yearold son is the lawful king of England. Another man, in impostor, is to be crowned, and I want you to stop it so my boy can get his king-Senator Platt said he would see about it, but could do nothing that day, as the president was in New York. The man said he would come around again.

"I'm going to get a new horse, father," said the younger Mr. Sells. "I'm going to give that horse of mine over there and $90 for the horse the man has hitched to that wagon. Mr. Sells senior looked at both horses. "Lew," he said solemnly, "give the man both horses and keep your money." Would Have Bankrupted Rhodes. Cecil Rhodes once was conversing with Emperor William in regard to an agreement entered into between the German government and himself about the construction of the Cape to Cairo telegraph line through German territory in Africa. The emperor said, "Well, Mr. Rhodes, I hope you are satisfied with the arrangement." "No," re-plied Rhodes, "unless, sir, you want to see Cecil Rhodes file his petition in bankruptcy." "What do you mean?" asked the kaiser. "I mean," was the reply, "that there is a clause in this document which provides that while your majesty undertakes to protect the telegraph against attacks or injury Cecil Rhodes has to pay the whole cost incurred in such defense. Now, sir, there is nothing in the clause to prevent you from sending a whole army corps for this purpose, and if I had to pay for that I should have to file my petition." The kaiser laughed and said, "Quite right," and, turning to Count von Bulow, who was present, said: "Add words limiting Mr. Rhodes' liability to £40,000. That's fair, I think." To which Rhodes replied that he was perfectly satisfied. Distance Lends Enchantment. During the session of the British parliament in 1879 James Lowther, the chief secretary for Ireland, rose from his seat and was hurriedly leaving the house just as Mr. Synan, an Irish representative with a very loud voice, began to call attention to some Irish grievance, Another Irish member, thinking it strange that the chief secretary should leave the chamber when a question relating to Ireland was being brought forward, called out: "Hi, hi, Lowther! Where are you going?" Turning as he reached the door, Mr. Lowther coolly replied, "I am going out on the terrace to hear Synan."
