Bill Arp in Atlanta Constitution. The bantam hen has batched and three little grand children are happy. They can't talk fast enough to tell me about them. There are little things in our domestic life and there are big things, but I believe the little things are

For a mouth or more these children have been waiting and watch ing for the bantam ben to lay her litter and hatch her little brood and this morning the telephone bell rang furiously and it said: "Our bantam ben has batche '." and soon they came running to tell William Weaver, the young us about them, but they didn't stay back and look after the bantams. Well, there is nothing prettier in all nature than a little brood of bantam chickens and my faith is they were created especially to make little children happy. It seems that they originated in a little town of that name on the island of Java and have been transplanted to other countries. They are a game bird and a bantam cooster will attack and whip an ordinary gam cock of five times its weight. # THE BROAD JUMPER.

His Training Must Be Systematic to Get the Best Results. Every schoolboy thinks that he can broad tump, and so he can to a certain degree. But this event is one which should be gone at systematically to get the best results. The jumper should first carefully notice his stride on going up to the take off, so that he can mark off a distance-say twenty-five yards back-and by stepping on this mark with one of his feet as he runs by he will be sure to strike the take off when he comes to it. The jumper can-not be sure of getting his best efforts into his jump unless he is practically sure of hitting the take off. After this has been acquired the athlete can get

In this run the jumper's highest or twelve feet before the take off, so that he can gather himself for the jump. After leaving the take off he should shoot out and up. He must have elevation or his efforts will be in vain. He should go into the air at an angle of at least forty-five degrees. A good way to get this elevation is by placing a hurdle in the jumping pit and jumping over it. The jumper should gather himself together as he goes through the air, and at the finish, just before alighting, he should force himself on by a spasmodic effort with his arms and body. The legs will strike the ground at the farthest possible distance. Practice will show how far out the feet can be thrown without the athlete's falling back into the pit. It be thrown with safety. A great deal of practice is necessary to become a good broad jumper, but this is an event which it is not well to practice too frequently, as it is very hard on the legs. The broad jumper will therefore not expect to get at his best during his first season.-G. W. Orton in St.

BERMUDA MAIDENS.

The Reason So Many of Them Decide to Remain Unmarried. In proportion to population there are more old maids in the Bermudas than in any other part of the world. This is true of all classes of the population, but especially of the oldest and wealthwith the islands ever since they were colonized by the Virginia company in Five out of six of the daughters of the old planting families do not marry in spite of the fact that they are pretty, with a delicate rose flush type of beauty, extremely well bred and accomplished and just as nice as girls can possibly be. Their failure to marry is a standing source of wonder to the whole of the West Indies. An antiquated law is undoubtedly responsible in part for this state of things. By this law provision is made for the daughters to take shares of a landed estate when their father dies, but if one marries she loses her fortune. It is taken away and shared among the others. Under this law many a girl of the better class is robbed of the dowry which is rightfully hers. Sometimes she will not marry her sweetheart at the cost of her fortune; sometimes the mercenary swain will not marry her if she has nothing to bring him but herself.

Rustie Work.

Sooner or later every owner of a country home runs up against the idea of rustic work. Generally it hits him hard-sometimes too hard. If you really need seats or summer houses in your woodland nothing can be more appropriate than logs with the bark on, be cause they harmonize with the growing trees, says Country Life In America. This is the real secret of the popularity of rustic work, its fitness. It is opposed to costlier and more architectural features which make a strong contrast with patural surroundings. Occasionally, however, you will find a man who has fallen head over heels in love with rustic work for its own sake. The consequece is that he fills the lawn in front of his house with all sorts of rustic impossibilities which look doubly foolish because they have no earthly use and because they are out in a sunny spot five to fifty dollars, the editor in the midst of an environment which is civilization rather than nature.

> An Organ In the Tenth Century. Wolston speaks of an organ containing 400 pines which was erected in the tenth century in England. This instrument was blown by "thirteen separate pairs of bellows." It also contained a large keyboard. There are drawings of that period extant which represent the organ as an instrument having but few pipes, blown by two or three persons and usually performed on by a monk. The keys, which were played upon by hard blows of the fist, were very clumsy and from four to six inches broad.

> About the end of the eleventh century semitones were introduced into the keyboard, but to all appearances its compass did not extend beyond three octaves. 'The introduction of pedals in 1490 by Bernhardt-giving a compass B flat to A-was another important contribution to the instrument. These were merely small pieces of wood operated by the toe of the player.

An old Kentucky indictment has been brought to our attention which alleged that defendant "did unlawfully, willfully and maliciously kill and de stroy one pig, the personal property of George Pigg, without the consent of said Pigg, the said pig being of value to the aforesaid George Pigg. The pig thus killed was the mate to some other pigs that were owned by said George Pigg, which left George Pigg a pig less than he (said Pigg) had of pigs and thus ruthlessly tore said pig from the society of George Pigg's other pigs against the peace and dignity of the commonwealth of Kentucky." - Case and Comment.

OPTICAL ILLUSIONS.

They Are Oftentimes the Cause Collisions at Sea.

Speaking of collisions at sea, a aptain recently said; "I think I can explain the cause of many collisions which otherwise seem to be mysterious. They arise from the fact that green and red are complementary colors. Every ship under way carries at night a red light burning on her left or port side and a green light burning on her right or starboard side. Yet vessels go crashing into each other upon nights when these lights must be plainly visible from their decks. And when the case comes up in court and an effort is made to establish the blame of the accident honest men swear directly opposite to each other and believe they are telling the truth. "The captain of one ship, for instance, will swear that be saw a red light on his port bow and held his course. A little later he saw a green light there, starboarded his helm, and the collision followed. The men on the other ship swear that where the captain says he saw a green light a red light was burning. "Now, how does this happen? It happens this way: The captain looks for awhile intently at the red light on the other vessel. Then for some reason he changes his line of vision, probably due to a bulging sail above the light, and, lo, he sees at once a green light, shifts his helm, and, crash, he goes into her! He really does not see any light at all when he looks at the sail, but an optical illusion makes him think he

THE OLD RELIABLE

Book Publishing In the Middle Ages. When in the middle ages an author at any European university desired to publish his thoughts his book was read over twice in the presence of the authorities and if approved might be copied and exposed for sale, a practice in which the germs for state licensing may be readily distinguished. It was evidently necessary, however, to keep a strict watch over the persons employed in this business, and the statutes of the University of Paris show that the booksellers were subjected to a very severe discipline. They were obliged to keep a list of the books they sold and to exhibit their scale of charges, and they were forbidden to purchase any manuscript till it had been duly approved by the authorities and publicly exposed to view for four

The stoves of the middle ages and of the era of the Roman empire and throughout Germany and Scandinavia generally were built of brick, tiles or similar material and were so large as to be stationary, sometimes taking up the whole side of a room, and in the latter country in winter the couches and blankets were spread thereon and the family used them in lieu of the bedsteads of subsequent years.

The fire was built at the bottom, and the heat and smoke passed through vathey made their exit to the chimney. Some of them were faced with porcelain and were highly ornamental.

A Fool's Retort. One day at the court of Ferdinand II. a silly courtier fancied that he could amuse those present by his frivolities. which prompted Jonas, Ferdinand's favorite fool, to answer him according to his folly. Madeira Island Roads. In the whole of the Madeira Islands there are no wheeled vehicles, for the roads are too rough and mountainous There are a few heavy sledges drawn by bullocks, but the favorite modes of locomotion are hammocks slung on poles and borne by natives and basket sledges. The latter are used for de scending the mountains and are skill fully guided by a runner behind.
