The trouble is reported as baving occurred last Toursday night. It was then that a party of uppe: class students are reported to have invaded a room in which there were a number of freshmen, whom they undertook to black.

COUNT CASSINI In North American Review For May. I have been invited by the North American Review to make a statement of Russia's position in the far eastern conflict. Contributing articles to magazines and newspapers is not the mission of a diplomat, and I have been obliged to decline many kind invitations from the periodical press. In furnishing this statement to the North American Review I am actuated by the hope that it will be alike for the benefit of Russia and the readers of the magazine. In the progress of the negotiations begun last summer between St. Petersburg and Tokyo Russia showed at all times a most conciliatory spirit. She modified her terms time and again, so intent was his majesty the emperor upon preserving the peace of the empire. At all times, however, my government insisted upon a mutual and unconditional guarantee of the principle of the independence and integrity of Korea, on an undertaking to use no When the sad message, "Nettie part of Korea for strategic purposes, as the authorization of such action on the part of any foreign power was directly opposed to the principle of the independence of Korea, and finally on the preservation of the full freedom of navigation of the strait of Korea.

The Japanese government declined to demanding again that Russia incorpo-St. Petersburg and Tokyo governments a declaration defining anew the rights which Japan was to enjoy in Manchuof my government's future intentions in that province. First because such a subject was quite irrelevant to the neto see my dear mother and the gotiations in progress and for the additional reason that Manchuria was a question to be settled between Russia and China, in which Japan was no more legitimately concerned than any other power my government refused to accede to these demands. To have entered into a separate arrangement with Japan regarding Manchuria would not only have been a violation of good faith with China, but with the powers which, with Russia and Japan, signed the peace protocol of 1900. However, in another effort to bring the negotiations to a peaceful conclusion my country did all that dignity would permit and offered to give assurances again that the sovereignty of the emperor of China in Manchuria would be recognized. Such a declaration had already been addressed to the powers. Having made this marked concession solely in the interest of peace, my government awaited the Japanese answer in the expectation that it would at least be diplomatic in character and would furnish the basis for the furtherance of the negotiations to a satisfactory conclusion. Before the Russian minister at Tokyo could deliver this rethrough the regular channels, but as a torpedo attack at midnight. And now that war has come Russia does not doubt the issue. It is not a thoughtless statement that were Japan to obtain supreme control in Manchuria the dominant military spirit of the Japanese would lead them army of such proportions that Europe and America would stand aghast at this menace to their peace and well being. That is a phase of what has been called the "yellow peril" that it would be well for the thoughtful and intelligent classes to consider carefully. The Chinese make good soldiers. To suppose them to be pusillanimous in character is erroneous. They are easily trained by competent instructors, and with a population of more than 430,-000,000 to draw from an army could be raised that, co-operating with Jaconfidence, defy the civilized world.

pan, might, with a reasonable show of You in America should pause to contemplate the result of a union of the two great Mongol races, one progressive, aggressive, alert, overambitious, dreaming dreams of standing dominant not only in the far east, but in the councils of the powers; the other imitative, easily influenced, ready if not anxious to have a stronger hand mold its flaccid character into whatever shape would be best suited to carry out a scheme of national aggrandize ment. You of America as well as we of Europe have this to confront. It is not Russia alone that the danger looks to his own interests, and nations and the people composing them are the same in that respect. I know that in Europe there is a disposition to credit America with the worship of the mighty dollar above all else, but my experience in this great land, many of whose distinguished citizens have given me a friendship that I deeply appreciate, has taught me that money is not everything and that the hearts of men and women are full of those Christian qualities that place honor and fair play higher than mere sordidness. Believ ing that the American people, however much their judgment may have been warped at times by misconception of the truth, will see that there are two sides to the present unfortunate conflict in Asia, I do not doubt that they ly helpful to them. Let us consider the issue in the far east from the practical standpoint and see to what extent it bears on the sentimental. It is claimed that with Russia out of Manchuria that great province would be a lucrative market for American textile goods, agricultural implements and notions. But would there be no competition in this trade? Immediately the rivalry of Japan suggests itself. There are no people so quick to learn as the Japanese. They are intelligent, deft, wonderfully imitative. With the opportunity of commercial success in Manchuria present-will ultimately reach the conclusion that Russian progress is not only not inimical to their interests, but distinct-ed how quickly they would appreciate the value of learning the art of making the goods demanded by the count- river. less inhabitants of that territory! Cheap grades of cotton fabrics are necessary to the Manchurlans; Japan would not be long in learning to fashion them. Manchuria, given up to tilling the soil, requires agricultural implements; the Japanese would quickly be turning out plows and harrows, reapers and scythes. With their cheaper labor and their nearness to Manchuria no other people could compete with the Japanese.

sake that Russia, triumphant in this war, finds herself dominant in Manchuria. Japan, her enemy, could look for no favors; she could not expect to find encouragement for the importation of her manufactures. But Manchuria would require many things that Russia could not supply or supply at figures In Russia agriculture is, comparatively speaking, more important than manufacturing, and those goods which are made in my country are not such as Manchuria would need. Russia, too, would be obliged to use the rallway, with its high freight tariffs. Contrast Russia's position commercially toward Manchuria with that of the United States. In this country are made not only the very materials that would find a ready sale among the people of the province, but with American goods shipped by an all water route the cost of transportation would be much lower than the cost of carrying on the all land routes to which Russia would be confined. Should Russia ship by water to Manchuria from Odessa the distance would still be too great to make competition with the United States successful. From Moscow to Port Arthur the distance by rail is 5,000 miles. It is therefore easy to realize the privileged position of the United States in competing over an all water route from the Pacific coast with Russia over an all rail route.

What then, taking these matters into consideration, is the far eastern question viewed in its commercial aspect from the American point of view? On the one hand stands Manchuria open a manufacturing Japan capable of making the goods needed in Manchuria and of making them cheaper than America can make them and having the additional advantage of short all water freight rates. On the other hand stands Manchuria under Russian control, with a friendly hand extended to the United States and Japan given no encouragement. To my mind the conclusion is obvious. What better evidence of Russian friendship could America have than such an opening or, to merge the practical with the sentimental, what better results could follow for both America and Russia than mutual co-operation in the stimulation of American trade with Manchuria?

Hot Meal Without a Fire. Readers of the war news will have noticed one or two references to the fact that tinned meats for the Russian troops are prepared by a process which enables the contents of each tin to be served hot without a fire. This boon is secured by having the ordinary tins filled with food "jacketed" in patent tins, says London Truth. The patent tin contains water, together with a chemical mixture, by means of which the water can be raised to boiling point in ten minutes or a quarter of an hour. All that it is necessary to do when it is desired to heat the food is to puncture the top of the patent tin, the chemical mixture being thereby forced into the water, which soon begins to boll. A Fashionable Gem.
