FARRAND ORGANS.
When discussing the subject of high grade organs one's mind naturally turns to the historic name of the Far-rand, which for over twenty-three years has been in the lead of high grade musical instruments. The Farrand possesses a most wonderfully sweet tone and is unequalled for its durable qualities.
My second Car Loan for Lenoir, N. C., has just arrived and I am sure that it will place your order with me for a Farrand you will never regret it. The increasing demand for the Farrand organs is sufficient evidence that they are appreciated.

Henry Gassaway Davis

HENRY GASSAWAY DAVIS, the Democratic vice presidential nominee, is a man with more than an ordinary business and political career. In West Virginia and nearby states he long has been regarded as a financial giant, and his political life has been characterized by conservatism and sagacity.
His nomination at St. Louis confers upon him the peculiar distinction of being the oldest candidate ever selected for the office. Mr. Davis having been born in Woodstock, Md., on Nov. 16, 1823. His father was Caleb Davis, a successful Baltimore merchant, who died a few years after the son's birth, and his mother was a Miss Louise Brown, whose sister was the mother of Senator Gorman of Maryland.
Like Judge Parker, Mr. Davis spent his early days on a farm. He received his education in a village school and at the age of twenty entered the employ of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad as a brakeman. This was the first railroad built in America, and Mr. Davis has the distinction of having been the first brakeman on any railroad in the United States. He was soon advanced to the position of conductor and was then the only railroad conductor in the country. An amusing story illustrative of the grip of early associations on a retentive nature used to be told of him in Washington. It is said that well toward morning of a wearisome all night session of the senate Senator Davis was asleep, his head resting upon his desk. Senator Edmunds had provoked Judge Thurston to a speech, and by introduction the judge unfurled his red handkerchief and blew a blast of more than usual power. Mr. Davis may have been dreaming of his old railroad days. At any rate, he sprang to his feet in a half dazed condition and, catching sight of the red flag—the old signal of danger—and seeming to imagine that he had heard a shriek of alarm from the open throat of a locomotive calling for "Down brakes!" seized his desk and with the brakeman's quick twist wrenched it from the floor.

It was while serving as a conductor that Mr. Davis met and formed the acquaintance of Henry Clay, who was a passenger upon Mr. Davis' train while going from his Kentucky home to the capital and returning. Clay would board the train in Baltimore and leave it at its western terminus and make the journey over the mountains into Kentucky in the old fashioned stagecoach. Mr. Davis got his first eighty-first year, is as spry as a man of sixty, and a good deal sprier than many. He was a delegate to the recent national convention and a member of the committee on resolutions. He was chosen as a member of the subcommittee that had charge of the platform, and he stayed up all night during the deliberations of that committee at the Southern hotel. When he went to the Jefferson hotel at noon the next day he did not appear fatigued, and he told his friends he could stand another twenty-four hours if he were so not. He favored the inclusion of a gold plank in the platform. When his name was being considered by the national convention there was some question as to whether he supported Bryan in 1896 and 1900. Chairman Jones of the Democratic national committee put it at rest by saying that in 1896 Senator Davis presided at a Bryan meeting in West Virginia and voted for Bryan. At that time Senator Davis was engaged in building a railroad and had a large obligation at a bank which he desired to renew. When he went to the bank the president said:

"I understand you presided at a Bryan meeting last night."
"Yes," said Davis. "What of it?"
"Well," said the bank president, "don't you know that the theories of Bryan are opposed to all the financial institutions in this country? I do not see how you can come to this bank or any other for favors, holding the views that you do."
"Do you mean to say," asked Davis, "that the fact that I remain loyal to the Democratic party makes any difference with you?"
"Not at all," said the bank president. "But we are not inclined to do any favors for such people."
"This is no favor to me," said Davis. "I am simply carrying this obligation as a business transaction, and if you don't want to renew it I'll pay it now and withdraw my patronage from the bank."
The bank president grew alarmed at this, because Senator Davis is heavily interested in financial operations in West Virginia, and he begged Davis to reconsider. Davis would not reconsider. He paid the obligation in cash that afternoon and cut that bank off his list of business connections.
Senator Davis is many times a millionaire. He has been an enthusiastic Gorman man ever since the canvass for the Democratic nominee in 1904 began. At one time he said he would spend a million dollars to secure the nomination of Gorman, and it was no mere idle boast, because he had the money and would spend it.
Personally, Senator Davis is an affable, genial man, democratic and modest. He does not look his years, and to the casual observer he would appear to be not more than sixty-five. He is more than six feet tall, erect and straight as in the days of his youth. His shoulders are square. He is well muscled. He has a springy heel and toe walk. There is not the slightest evidence of any loss of mental or bodily vigor.
His face features are regular and bold. His nose is aquiline. His eyes are gray and sharply penetrating, but without kindly in expression and set wide apart. His face is not deeply furrowed, though fine wrinkles appear about the eyes.
Early in his public career he assumed an unequivocal position on financial questions, from which he has never departed. Almost at the beginning of his legislative service he was confronted with the issue of the responsibility of West Virginia for a portion of the debt of the Old Dominion. Despite the advice of friends who considered momentary popularity rather than justice, he took a bold stand in favor of his state's meeting her just proportion of the debt of the mother state, when that equitable proportion could be ascertained. By reason of his determination he made a profound impression upon all his associates.
Until recently Mr. Davis was president of the West Virginia Central and Pittsburg railroad, which he projected, and also of the Piedmont and Cumberland railroad. He was one of the delegates to the pan-American congress and was a member of the United States intercontinental railway commission. Today he is known as one of West Virginia's "Big Four" and had the boom of Senator Gorman materialized he was to have managed it.
In 1853 he married Miss Kate A. Bantz, a daughter of Judge Gideon Bantz of Frederick, Md. He has two sons, John T. Davis and Henry G. Davis, Jr., and three daughters, Mrs. Stephen B. Elkins, Mrs. R. M. G. Brown, wife of Lieutenant Commander Brown, U. S. N., and Mrs. Arthur Lee. Mr. Davis' wife died two years ago. He has a beautiful villa at Deer Park, Md., where he passes the summer months, but his home as a voter is at Elkins, W. Va., where his residence adjoins that of United States Senator Stephen B. Elkins, his son-in-law. The people of Elkins are very fond of ex-Senator Davis, who has done very much for that town. He built the Davis Memorial hospital at a cost of nearly $100,000 in memory of his son, who was drowned while crossing on the African coast. With Senator Elkins he has founded the Davis and Elkins college, a Presbyterian institution at Elkins that soon will be dedicated. He was also instrumental in the erection of the Davis Memorial Presbyterian church at Elkins.
Ex-Senator Davis, though in his

A BEAT THAT FAILED

HOW THE PLANS OF AN ENTERPRISING EDITOR WERE UPSET.

The climax to the great Dobbins-Domino Match Race as it developed in the Office of One of the Metropolitan Afternoon Dailies.
"I never read of a close finish in a big running race nowadays that I'm not reminded of a famous punctured scoop, in which I figured when I was working in a New York newspaper office," said an old time telegrapher who is now employed in Washington.
"It was back in the days when the great Domino was the star colt of the Keene stable and, with one exception, was his only rival, for the greatest two-year-old of the season."
"The exception was Richard Croker's fier Dobbins. These two youngsters finally met in the Futurity, and, although the Keene colt won, with Dobbins third, the latter's owner was not satisfied with the result, and a match was speedily arranged at the Futurity distance for $10,000 a side.
"Now, the paper I worked on was an evening sheet, and it was the ambition of the managing editor's life to beat the opposition evening paper and get the news of a big event like this on the street first."
"The other fellows had beaten us on the Futurity story a few days before, and the managing editor made no secret of the fact that he was going to get even."
Accordingly he laid all of his plans a day in advance, and he wanted me to have one of the other operators take the result of the fourth race, and he also wanted me to get a wire in good working order and prepare to get the result of the fifth race.
"The scheme was to have two presses set and all ready to start. One of them was to have the big front page headline read 'Dobbins Wins the Big Match,' and the other just the same, except that Domino's name appeared in the place of Dobbins'. The Dobbins extra was on press No. 1 and the Domino extra on press No. 2. Whichever horse won, the managing editor was to call No. 1 or No. 2, and the press would be started in quicker time than it takes to tell of the arrangement.
"I couldn't help but inwardly smile as I watched the managing editor striding nervously about, waiting for the start, just like a man who had thousands of dollars wagered on the chance of one of the races.
"Suddenly the key of my instrument began to click, and he quickly stopped and looked anxiously at me, but it proved to be only the operator at the other end testing. Learning this, he resumed his walk up and down the room.
"Presently the key began to click again. This time the horses were on their way to the post. The next I got from the other end was that the horses were at the post and would be off in a minute. This information, instead of steadying the managing editor, only increased his jumpiness, for he ordered the man who was framing the wires to cease their talking and also called downstairs half a dozen times to know if everything was ready below in the press room.
"In the midst of this the key again began to work, and I called out that they were off.
"The click of the instrument that followed now told me that they were moving along, nose and nose, at the quarter. At the half mile Domino was in the lead by a nose, and as I announced this I was catching the managing editor, and I could see his lips framing the words 'No. 2,' which was the Domino press.
"Dobbins just managed to shove his nose in front at the three-quarters and the boss moved nearer the speaking tube as I made this announcement. Coming into the stretch the two game colts were head and head, and the managing editor, with the mouthpiece of the speaking tube pressed tightly against his lips, was waiting for the result.
"Well, the result came along in good season. But never so long as I live shall I forget the expression on that editor's face when he was told that the match race was a dead heat. I hesitated just a second before calling it out, for I could almost picture in my mind what effect it would have on him. Finally I called out in as firm a voice as I could, 'Dead heat!'
"Well, that editor's knees just gave way from under him. If he had not grabbed a chair I am positive he would have fallen to the floor.
"Dead heat?" he gasped, with a livid face. "Are you sure?"
"I told him that it had been repeated to me and that there could be no mistake. He was too dumfounded to move for two or three seconds, but when he saw all of the men who were about to jump to their places ready to throw together a new scare head, while others hustled around to find the stereotypers, who almost to a man had gone out of the building, he came to in a jiffy and was the same old hustler.
"Everybody took hold and worked harder probably than he ever worked before or since, and although we didn't beat the opposition paper, as we were so certain of doing, we were on the street only a minute or so behind it. We afterward learned that they had made exactly the same arrangements to beat us and had been fooled in precisely the same way."—Washington Star.

Crimson Clover

Sown at the last working of the Corn or Cotton Crop, can be plowed under the following April or May in time to plant corn or other crops the same season. Crimson Clover prevents winter leaching of the soil, is equal in fertilizing value to a good application of stable manure and will wonderfully increase the yield and quality of corn or other crops which follow it. It also makes splendid winter and spring grazing, fine early green feed, or a good hay crop. Even if the crop is cut off, the action of the roots and stubble improve the land to a marked degree.
