Western North Carolina All Right.
Mr. Ira M. Hawkins, of Yadkin Valley, in a recent issue of the Progressive Farmer gives the following explanation of how he came to this part of the state and why he likes it so well:
Life in New York City was so replete with opportunity and fields for service that I soon found my strength ebbing despite the fact. I was very careful as to habits, diet, etc. I concluded to join the "Back to the Landers" and fly to the open fields. I canvassed the inducements and decided to inspect the Southeast. I liked Virginia very much, but land there was too high. I found an orchard and other productive land in western North Carolina for sale at a fraction of the rates further North and took title a few years ago.
As to results and opinions I find these conditions:
1. We have a long season of growth with little biting cold to chill plants, animals and humans. This means that we have a longer time to plant and gather crops, a long pasture season for cattle, hens and hogs with the many glorious spring and fall days. We are not rushed from frigid blasts to baking heat.
2. An abundant rainfall which is of priceless value to plant growth with rarely a flood or drought.
3. A soil rich in potash capable of growing nearly every farm crop with profit. It is especially friendly to the legumes.
4. I find it easy to grow legumes to enrich the soil. It is often impossible to get a crop of certain legumes in the North while here I can grow them all without inoculation.
5. All farm crops here find a ready sale at prices far above the rates in other sections. Low prices for farm products is unknown.
6. Intelligent help at low rates.
7. The people are pure American and rank first for kindness, gentleness and hospitality.
I am content and hopeful with all my eggs carefully sequestered in a Southern basket. I have bidden my friends to come as it is a region of promise to bright, energetic men.

More Than 800,000 on Government Pension Roll.
Washington Dispatch.
There are now on the government's pension roll 538,000 soldiers and sailors, 321,932 dependents and widows and 362 army nurses, according to the annual report of the pension bureau. These include 497,263 survivors of the civil war and 238 widows of the war of 1812. To provide for all of them this year, $151,558,141 has been appropriated, a decrease of $3,276,096 from last year.
It is estimated that there were 2,213,365 individuals in the military and naval service of the United States during the civil war, and that upward of 75 per cent. of them are now dead. The report predicts that the abolishment of the pension agencies effective January 31, 1913, and the payment of all pensions direct from the pension bureau will result in a more efficient and economical administration, avoiding duplication of work and saving expense.
The total number of pensioners under general pension laws is 838,210, their pensions aggregating $144,973,569, and under special acts of Congress, 22,084, aggregating $6,584,572 annually.
From the foundation of the government to June 30 last the United States paid $4,383,368,164 in pensions to soldiers, sailors and marines, their widows, minor children and dependent relatives on account of military and naval service in the various wars and in regular service.

The Selection of Postmaster by Primary Election.
Statesville Landmark.
A dispatch from Terrell, Texas, says there are so many Democratic candidates for postmaster at Terrell since the election that a move is on foot to hold a special "postmaster primary election" and declare the one securing the highest vote the only applicant. This plan has been put up to Congressman James Young, of the district, who refused to consider it until he consulted with President-elect Wilson.
The same plan has been suggested to select a postmaster for Charlotte. Under the second Cleveland administration, in 1893, the primary plan was tried in Statesville but didn't work. There were three candidates for postmaster—Mr. J. A. Hartness, Dr. L. Harrill and Mr. C. W. Boshamer. When a primary was proposed the friends of Mr. Boshamer declined to have anything to do with it, on the ground that there was no definite way of determining who was entitled to vote and no assurance that the government would accept that method. The primary was held, however, and Mr. Hartness won by an overwhelming vote. But the appointing power did not recognize the primary and Mr. Boshamer was appointed postmaster.

Mrs. L. L. Kincaid.
Lemoir Topic, 20th.
Lorenzo Legrand Baker was born Feb. 26, 1829, and died at her home on John's river, Oct. 17, 1912, being almost 84 years old. Deceased was a daughter of the late Richard Baker and on Dec. 18, 1851, she was married to William Wilburn Kincaid. To them were born six children, F. M. Kincaid of Burke county, Columbus (died in infancy) Mary Virginia, J. L. Kincaid of Idaho, J. R. Kincaid with whom she lived and Mrs. Allie Teague of Burke county. Mrs. Kincaid had a hard time, for at the beginning of the Civil War, she was left at home with her small children and at the close of the war her husband came home and died in just one week after he got home (July 12, 1865.) Now began a brave struggle to raise her family and with the aid of some of her faithful old slaves she succeeded.
She was a good, noble christian woman, having joined the church on Nov. 15, 1885, she lived a true and loyal member until the time of her death. When Laurel Hill Methodist church was built, she gave the land on which it is built, besides helping otherwise.
She was a woman of wonderful memory and retained it until the last.
Her death was due to a general breakdown, not ever being a strong woman and being so old, she never fully overcame the shock caused by the deaths of her daughter-in-law and grand child (Mrs. J. R. Kincaid and baby) who died just a few weeks before she died.
Truly a good woman is gone and "Aunt Legrand," as she was generally called, will be missed by all.

Popular Vote in Presidential Elections.
Statesville Landmark.
A contemporary says the following figures of the popular vote for President this year are approximately correct: Wilson, 6,475,000; Roosevelt, 4,285,000; Taft, 3,500,000. This gives Wilson about 2,000,000 over Roosevelt and more than 3,000,000 over Taft; but the combined vote of Roosevelt and Taft is about 1,000,000 in excess of the Wilson vote.
It is a fact, however, that in the history of the country many men have been elected President who did not receive a majority of the popular vote. In 1824 Andrew Jackson, John Q. Adams, Henry Clay and W. H. Crawford were voted for. Jackson received the largest popular vote, having 50,551 over Adams, but Adams was elected. In 1844 James K. Polk, the successful candidate, had a plurality of 38,175. Henry Clay being the next highest, but Polk lacked 44,125 of a majority of popular vote—the vote cast for Clay and Birney exceeding the vote of Polk by that much. In 1848 Zachary Taylor had a plurality of 139,557. But the combined vote cast for Cass and Martin Van Buren in that election was 151,706 in excess of the vote of Taylor. Lincoln had 491,195 over Douglas in 1860 but the combined vote of Douglas, Breckinridge and Bell was 944,139 more than the vote cast for Lincoln. In 1876 Tilden had 250,935 over Hayes. The combined vote against Hayes exceeded his vote by 343,833, and yet Hayes was counted in. In 1880 Garfield had only 7,018 over Hancock and the combined vote against Garfield exceeded his vote by 311,294. In 1884 Grover Cleveland had 62,683 over Blaine but the total vote for Cleveland was 221,941 less than the combined vote for his opponents—Blaine, St. John and B. F. Butler. In 1888 Cleveland failed in the electoral college but he had of the popular vote 98,017 more than Harrison and the combined vote cast against Harrison was 500,428 greater than the vote cast for him. Harrison, it will be seen, was not only more than a half million votes in the minority on the popular vote but his chief opponent had nearly 100,000 more votes than he had, yet Harrison had 233 in the elec-

Here Was an Honest Man.
Rev. J. M. White, an aged Baptist preacher and school teacher, died in Franklin county a few days ago. More than 30 years ago, says the Raleigh News and Observer, Mr. White was a merchant in Raleigh and his firm failed, with an indebtedness of $5,000. Mr. White was not legally responsible for the debt; the failure may not have been his fault. But he went to work and out of his meager salary as preacher and teacher, he reared and educated his children and paid every cent of the $5,000 indebtedness.
There are few like that.

Meeting Burke County Teachers' Association.
Reported for the News-Herald.
The Burke Teachers' Association held its first meeting of the year in the graded school auditorium at Morganton Saturday, November 23rd.
The house was called to order by Pres. Hairfield, and the general order of business was gone through with. Prof. Hairfield was re-elected president for the following year, with J. B. Cooper as vice-president, W. E. Hauss secretary and treasurer and Prof. Weaver chaplain.
The program of the morning session was as follows:
1. Care, protection sanitation of school building and school ground during the school term.
2. Entertainments and social activities. Do they help our schools?
There being no regular speakers appointed, the following teachers made excellent speeches on the subjects: Prof. Hairfield, Mr. Puett, J. B. Cooper, and Supt. T. L. Sigmon.
The evening session was taken up in the discussion of organizing teachers' township meetings, North Carolina Day programs, teachers' co-operation with the boys corn clubs and the girls' tomato clubs, and various other subjects of interest to the teachers and their patrons.
All teachers present felt they were greatly benefited by this meeting and adjourned to meet again sometime in January.

Republicans Making Last Grab at Pie Counter.
Washington Dispatch.
Hungry Republicans, foreseeing a four years political famine, are flooding the White House with letters begging for an opportunity to serve the public.
The avalanche of petitions for public office has almost inundated the executive office clerks and the arguments of the writers are said to be ingenious in the extreme. Many of the writers in a king for political preferment before the incoming of the Democratic administration, advance the idea that they might be overlooked when President Wilson took up the reins of office, while others pin their faith on being temporarily overlooked after the change in administration. There are few offices, however, and the White House is not filling many of those.

Senator Simmons' Campaign Expenses.
The final statement by United States Senator Simmons of expenses in the senatorial campaign, as required to be filed with the secretary of the United States Senate, shows that his entire expenses for the campaign as required to be reported aggregated $7,240.80 and the total contributions of friends to this fund was $2,763. The report published just before election showed $2,416 contributed and $5,738.12 expended and the final report shows $347 additional contributions and $1,452.68 additional expenses.
