REAL FRIEND IN NEED

STORY OF JAMES T. BRADY AND A NEW YORK NEWSBOY.

Famous Lawyer Rescued Orphan From Poverty and Started Him On Way to Prosperity.

It is several years ago now, but this story was told me shortly after my admission to the bar; it left a lasting impression, writes William Sulzer in the New York Times.

How the biting-cold wind howled and whistled that night as it swept down avenues and around corners. A lawyer, whose fame was known far and near, had just left his office on Broadway, where he had been detained by an important consultation, and was hastening as fast as he could uptown. At the corner of Duane street he saw a newsboy leaning against the lamp post; under his left arm were a few evening papers. He was shivering with the cold and crying. His shoes were broken so you could see his bare feet. His clothes were ragged.

He may have stood there for an hour or more; hundreds of people had passed him. Not so the lawyer. One glance told him the story; he approached the little urchin, and inquired the trouble. The boy, amid sobs, said that it was his birthday; he was just five years old; he had been out all the afternoon trying to sell his papers, with small success. The only friend he had in the world—his widowed mother—was lying ill in a tenement house a few blocks away.

The story touched the heart of his questioner. He took the boy by the hand and led him home. Up the rickety stairs to the top floor of the tenement; he opened the door into a little garret room; striking a match he lit the remains of an old candle.

To the side of the room some one was breathing heavily. It was a woman lying on what was not even an apology for a bed. Squalor and despair only were there. A hurried glance around told all. The little newsboy's mother lay there; she was asleep. The boy went over and kissed her affectionately. He put his arms around her neck and said, "Wake up, mamma, wake up, here's a nice man who wants to see you."

She awoke with a start, dazed and frightened. The stranger reassured her. She had a raging fever—she was dying there alone, and as well as she could she told her story of hardship and trials.

The lawyer summoned a physician, and everything that could be done to save her life was done. But the dread disease had progressed too far, and, notwithstanding the best medical aid, she died the next day, and the newsboy was an orphan. That week was a busy one for the lawyer. He neglected briefs, and clients, and cases. He personally superintended the burial of the woman. After the funeral he took charge of the orphan, sent him to school and college, and for years did for him all that a father could do for a loved son.

The lawyer has long since gone to his reward. The little newsboy is a prosperous merchant today in New York. He is loved and respected by all for his kindly spirit and his many generous benefactions.

He has an office downtown, and over his desk, in a most conspicuous place, hangs a large picture. Every lawyer in the state knows that picture—that massive head, those curly locks, that stern, kindly countenance—the picture of the newsboy's benefactor, James T. Brady.

How to Grow Tall.

A man's organs and those of his bones which are not subjected to pressure grow continuously until he is forty years old; that is to say, the heart should become stronger, the capacity of the lungs increase, and the brain should develop steadily until the fourth decade of life. Also one should wear a larger hat at the age of forty than at thirty.

A man ceases to grow tall, however, at the beginning of the third decade, because after that time the downward pressure exerted by the weight of the body while in the erect position compresses the vertebrae or small bones in the spine, the disks of cartilage between them, the pelvis, and the thigh bones, and the pressure overcomes the natural elasticity of the disks and the growth of these bones. However, a British scientist contends that were man a quadruped, and therefore freed from the downward pressure produced by his weight upon his spinal column, he would continue to grow in height for ten years longer than he does at present, since it has been found that bones not subjected to compression increase up to the fourth decade.

HIS STOMACH TROUBLES OVER.

Mr. Dyspeptic, would you not like to feel that your stomach troubles were over, that you could eat any kind of food you desired without injury? That may seem so unlikely to you that you do not even hope for an ending of your trouble, but permit us to assure you that it is not altogether impossible. If others can be cured permanently, and thousands have been, why not you? John R. Barker, of Battle Creek, Mich., is one of them. He says, "I was troubled with heartburn, indigestion and liver complaint until I used Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets, then my trouble was over." Sold by all dealers.

3 Children Each Have Two Hearts.

Easton, Penn., has what is pronounced by reliable physicians to be a case unequaled in medical history. The discovery was made by Dr. James A. Morgenstern, of that city.

Called to the home of Berton Perkins, of McCartney street, to attend a child suffering from chickenpox, the physician was amazed to find that not only the child had two hearts, but that the mother and two other children in the family were similarly consitituted.

The case of chickenpox was of such a virulent nature that a more than ordinary examination was called for. While inspecting the chest of the child the doctor made a startling discovery. A heart was beating on the right side. Dr. Morgenstern could scarcely credit his own faculties when a moment later he found another heart beating on the left side.

Calling Mrs. Perkins, the physician told her of a remarkable discovery. He asked permission to examine the other children, and found the same phenomenon. Mrs. Perkins at first hesitated undergoing an examination herself, but finally consented to it, and the physician found her also to be possessed of two hearts.

To-day, in company with several of Easton's leading physicians, Dr. Morgenstern visited the Perkins' home, having obtained consent from the family, and a minute examination confirmed his discovery.

Among other Easton physicians who have examined the family is Dr. Sterling D. Shimer. He expressed the opinion that either Mrs. Perkins and the children have each two hearts, or that their hearts are divided into two parts, one on each side of the chest, and performing distinct and separate functions. In either event, he said, no case is recorded where four instances of the kind have been found in one family.

Mrs. Perkins and her three children, Anna, Allen and Doris, aged 11, 13 and 14 years, respectively, are to all outward appearances normal in every respect. At the next meeting of the Northampton Medical Society one of the children will appear for examination, and the case will be observed by anatomists for future reference.

Few People Venture to Kick an Allen Hound.

Greensboro Dispatch, 18th.

A man here last night from Mt. Airy related an incident occurring in his town Thursday, which tends to show that the Allens of that section are well respected and seldom "crossed." He said that on Thursday Jack Allen, father of some of the Hillsville court house shooters, and brother of Floyd and Sidna Allen, came down from the mountains with a bunch of cattle, and along with Mr. Allen came his faithful dog—a long-eared hound. It seems that there is an anti-dog ordinance in Mt. Airy; that the law is stringent and gives the police authority to shoot stray dogs found on the streets. As Mr. Allen walked along the street, says this Mt. Airy man, an officer pulled his pistol and was in the act of shooting the dog when Allen raised his hand in warning and very quietly, but firmly remarked: "You might live longer if you don't shoot that dog." The officer's pistol was not discharged, it is said; instead it was replaced without a word and Allen's dog went trotting along the forbidden streets with its master.

A HERO IN A LIGHTHOUSE.

For years J. S. Donahue, So. Haven, Mich, a civil war captain, as a lighthouse keeper, averted awful wrecks, but a queer fact is, he might have been a wreck, himself, if Electric Bitters had not prevented. "They cured me of kidney trouble and chills" he writes, "after I had taken other so called cures for years, without benefit and they also improved my sight. Now, at seventy, I am feeling fine." For dyspepsia, indigestion, all stomach, liver and kidney troubles, they're without equal, Try them. Only 50c at W. A. Leslie's.

PRESIDENT TAFT WILL BE PROFESSOR OF LAW.

Accepts Kemp Professorship at Yale and Will Take Up His New Duties Early in April.

New Haven, Conn., Dispatch, 20th.

At the regular meeting of the Yale Corporation to-day, President Taft accepted the appointment of the Kent professorship of law at Yale. The President announced his intention of withdrawing from the corporation when he takes up the regular duties of the professorship. He plans to come to New Haven early in April and will deliver, this spring, some lectures of an optional character. His work will consist of a regular course of lectures on the general subject of constitutional law. He will also give some instruction in the law school, his exact courses there being not yet determined upon.

The Kent professorship was established in 1801, being named in honor of Chancellor James Kent of the class of 1781. There have only been four incumbents of the chair: Chief Justice David D. Daggett, of Connecticut; Clark Bissell and Henry Dutton, both Governors of Connecticut, and Edward J. Phelps, once American minister to England.

The Rev. Joseph H. Twichell, of Hartford, of the class of 1859, senior fellow of the Yale corporation, announced his resignation to-day after 38 years of service.

Hen Identifies Her Owner.

A. L. White, a farmer near Silverbrook, a suburb of Wilmington, Del., went to the police station to identify chickens that had been stolen from him by John Johnson, a negro. A hen ran up to him and began vigorously pecking at his trousers.

"Why, there is old Jennie!" exclaimed the farmer. "She knows me. She has been a pet of my family for more than a year." All the while the chicken rubbed against White pretty much as a cat would do. Then as though to show her gratitude, the hen went into a cell and laid an egg. Afterward she cackled loudly.

This upset the negro's denials of guilt and his claims that he owned the chicken. He was held for trial.

"And that is?"

"To know what the Chinaman really writes on my laundry ticket."

If a stranger, watch how close he looks at you while making out the ticket, and when you return it usually takes five minutes to find the package. All the while he is glancing at you and the ticket alternately and muttering something to himself.

Making Virginia Rich on Whisky.

Progressive Farmer.

In this connection we are reminded that every now and then somebody comes along and says North Carolina is making Virginia rich on whisky money. That is the remark a drinking man made in the presence of a Virginia drummer in the office of the Monroe Enquirer not long ago. Thereupon the Virginian responded in this illuminating manner, and we commend his response to all thoughtful people:

"I have been traveling in North Carolina since the first day of last August. I have been across the State, east and west, north and south; have been in most of the towns, and I have not had a man to ask me for a dime to buy a drink with, and I have noticed the absence of bums, and liquor-soaked down-and-outs on the streets of this State. I went home three weeks ago last Saturday, and I went only three or four blocks after leaving the depot, and during that walk three liquor-soaked bums, white men, who were simply down-and-out, asked me for a dime. Around the six or seven barrooms that I passed in that short walk I saw more drunken men than I have seen in North Carolina since last August. Yes, they are sending the money to our State for liquor, and it may be making some of our folks rich, but I'll tell you, old man, it is making many of our people poor."

[There is no room to doubt the truth of the above statements. All the North Carolinians we have known for thirty years have been too proud to beg even though their downfall was caused by imtemperance. After all has gone but manhood hundreds sober up, reconstruct their moral standard, go to work and live life over.]

Ghost of the Past on Hotel Register.

Asheville Citizen, 21st.

Covered with dust of more than a quarter of a century, a Battery Park register, bearing date 1887, was unearthed yesterday by one of the force of workmen now engaged in overhauling the hotel. It's pages, adorned with the names of men who moved in circles of prominence and riches recalled to those who saw them the days when Asheville rolled in prosperity and drew tourists from all quarters of the world.

The name of Grover Cleveland, whose visit in 1887 is remembered by many of the older citizens, stands out in the register in bold relief, as though it had been written yesterday. On another page are found the names of Harold and Stanley McCormick, who were young men then, but who later rose to positions of power in the McCormick Harvester trust.

Chauncey M. Depew, the prince of post-prandial orators, is registered on the old book, and his visit, too, is well remembered. The familiar scrawl of Bill Nye aroused memories of the night when he regaled an Asheville audience with samples of his inimitable wit. Judge W. A. Hoke, who is now a member of the North Carolina Supreme court, is another guest registered, but he wasn't a judge of any kind at that time. The name of Jean D. Wetmore recalls a figure who was once high in tobacco circles, and another name which marks rapid advance from one honor to another is that of Judge W. B. Council, of Hickory, for ten years a Superior court judge.

"Jag" Gone In Seven Minutes.

Dissipating a "jag" in seven minutes is the record that has been established by the precooling plant recently established at San Benito, in the lower Rio Grande valley.

While a car was being cooled preparatory to loading it with fruits and vegetables, the men having charge of the work found an intoxicated man lying in the gutter. Thinking to play a joke on him, they placed him in the car. He had been lying in the sun with the temperature playing about him in the neighborhood of 100 degrees, and the sudden change to a temperature only a few degrees above the freezing point was something of a shock.

At the end of seven minutes he was beating on the car door clamoring to get out.—San Antonio Light.

BITTEN BY A MAD HORSE.

Granite Falls Man the Victim—Goes to Take Pasteur Treatment.

Granite Falls Dispatch, 20th, to Greensboro News

Van Moore, a farmer living near here, was bitten by a rabid horfe Saturday. The horse was supposed to have been bitten by a mad dog some time ago but had shown no signs of hydrophobia until Friday. Mr. Moore was drenching the horse when it attacked him, biting him twice on the arm and leg, breaking the skin on his arm. The horse was killed at once and Mr. Moore took the afternoon train for Raleigh where he will take the pasteur treatment. Several rabid dogs have been killed lately but not until they had bitten many other dogs. A large dray horse belonging to L. T. Sharp was bitten some time ago but has shown no signs of hydrophobia yet.

Believed in Molasses.

Wakefield, Mass., Dispatch, 19th.

William Boone Eldred, who believed that by eating a gallon of molasses a week he had prolonged his life many years, died today at the age of 87. He ate molasses on all his food. When seventy years old, Eldred began riding a bicycle for exercise and according to his own figures covered 20,000 miles during the last 17 years. He was a descendant of Daniel Boone

First Tweed Trousers.

Sir Walter Scott's black and white tweed trousers figured in a paper dealing with the designing and coloring of Scotch tweeds read by Thomas Welsh at the opening session of the Textile congress at Harwick. The author was one of the earliest wearers of the tweed and the first pieces made were in the black and white design.

Colored checks were introduced by accident. A manufacturer had made a number of pieces and the white was so impure and soiled they could not be sold. Then some one suggested that if the pieces were dyed brown the defect would be covered. The suggestion was acted upon and a new check of black and brown was the result.

The new color was sent to London and sold rapidly. It was a short step to dye black and green and blue, and to make broken checks and the trade increased amazingly.

Ideas for colors were collected in the bed of the River Garry and the pass of Killiecrankie. It was now possible for a lady to have a reversible skirt made up in such a way that she might appear at one time in a modest blue and at another in the tartan of her clan.—London News and Leader.

Recording Sea Temperatures.

The superintendent of the Johns Hopkins Botanical Gardens, William H. Witte, has given to the public his ingenious plan for automatically recording changes in sea temperature when a ship is passing through the ice fields. Water flows through a small tank in the bow of the vessel, in which three distinct appliances serve to record the changes of temperature. These include a high and low thermometer, a copper plate which, lengthening or shortening, operates a lever and records the changes of temperature on a revolving drum and series of tubes filled with alcohol, the tubes being connected by a small alcohol filled pipe with a diaphragm which, through a lever and a pen, also records the changes of temperature on a drum. All records may be read in the pilot house.—Scientific American.

Golf That Is Mostly Ball Hunting.

There are two sorts of golf. One is where you do not hunt for the ball. Those who play the other sort are never found in the championship records. They traverse the links with amateur caddies or with no caddies at all. They sally out in twos, threes or fours, and play all against all. They expect to spend most of the time in ball hunting, which they have reduced to a science. They spread out in a line and walk the suspected area, each rallying to the other's need. Only when the ball is found does the game continue, and the players are lucky if they do nine holes before luncheon.

Estimating.

They were coming down town in the Fifth avenue bus.

"Do you know what, I'm jutht crathy for?" lisped she to him. "One of thothe cute thapire and diamond ringth for the little finger. Would that be very expenthive?"

"That would depend," said he sagely, "on how large the sapphires and diamonds are."

"Well," said she, considering, "I should thertainly want them large enough." Then, after a pause, "How much would that cotht?"—New York Evening Sun.

It is a good policy to leave a few things unsaid.—Elbert Hubbard.

BEST COUGH MEDICINE FOR CHILDREN.

"I am very glad to say a few words in praise of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," writes Mrs. Lida Dewey of Milwaukee, Wis. "I have used it for years both for my children and myself and it never fails to relieve and cure a cough or cold. No family with children should be without it as it gives almost immediate relief in cases of croup." Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is pleasant and safe to take, which is of great importance when a medicine must be given to young children. For sale by all dealers.

Floating Dock Risks.

At Lloyd's of late there has been an unusual amount of business in connection with the insurance of floating docks. Two of these huge structures—one of them with a lifting capacity of 32,000 tons, built at Birkenhead, and another of the same size constructed at Wallsend—are now, to the great relief of underwriters, at their destination, Portsmouth and Sheerness, respectively. The risk on both was $2,500,000, and during the towage of each several big reinsurances were effected at fairly high rates. Preparations are being made to take the dock of 25,000 tons, which was built at Barrow, across the Atlantic to Montreal, and three Dutch tugs have been engaged for the purpose. The policy at a premium of five guineas per cent. covers $1,250,000, but some underwriters, who fear trouble owing to the prospect of unfavorable weather conditions, are offering reinsurance at an advance of six guineas on the original figure. On the long voyage the anxiety of the market is naturally intense, as daily reports of the progress made are of course impossible.—Consular Reports.

A GIRL'S WILD MIDNIGHT RIDE

To warn people of a fearful forest fire in the Catskills a young girl rode horse back at midnight and saved many lives. Her deed was glorious but lives are often saved by Dr. King's New Discovery in curing lung trouble, coughs and colds which might have ended in consumption or pneumonia. "It cured me of a dreadful cough and lung disese," writes W. R Patterson, Wellington, Tex., "after four in our family had died with consumption. I gained 87 pounds. Nothing so sure and safe for all throat and lung troubles Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by W. A. Leslie.

Used Legs in Praying.

An interested spectator at the Confederate unveiling and a most interesting character was Mack Stevens of Madisonville, says the Princeton Leader.

It was he who during war times was condemned to be shot; the grave had been dug on Hogan's hill and the soldiers lined up. Stevens asked for permission to pray, and it was granted him. Leaning on a fence he suddenly vaulted it and made good his escape, although 15 or 20 shots were fired at him.
