Senator Overman last week got a resolution through the Senate that is making Republican officeholders tremble. It calls upon the civil service board and other officials who have the records, for all the civil service orders since 1900 and a report of all appointments under these orders, of the party affiliations of the appointees, the allotments to States, etc. There has evidently been a lot of crooked work in making civil service appointments when 90 per cent of the appointees have been Republicans.
