

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON
AUGUST 14TH, 1921.

Paul in Iconium and Lystra.
Golden Text: Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and Him only shalt thou serve.

Scripture Reading: Acts 14 Chap. We complete, in this lesson, the story of the first great foreign missionary journey.

Paul and Barnabas, having been driven from Antioch, came to Iconium. This city is much more noted historically than Antioch. "It is famous as the cradle of the rising power of the conquering Turks," having been the capital of the Seljukian Sultans and having a great part in the growth of the Ottoman Empire.

In Paul's time the city was probably not different from other important towns of Asia Minor. Certainly the treatment given the missionaries was the same: some gave heed to the message, the Apostle was allowed to preach for a time, then he was driven out. So Iconium was left and the gospel carried into a wilder region, to a cruder people—to Lystra and Derbe, cities of Lyconia. The district of Lyconia is bare and dreary, unwatered by streams. The cities of Lystra and Derbe were somewhere about the bases of the Black Mountains, but their exact sites have not been determined.

There is no mention of a Jewish synagogue in Lystra. Paul came in contact "with heathen superstition and mythology"—the superstition, too of a crude, ignorant people. Considering this: that the message was new in every sense of the word, the faith which Paul saw in the crippled man arouses our interest and wonder. We are reminded of stories of modern missionaries who, having spoken the Good News, are met with the statement, "It is what I have been waiting for all my life."

If one man of Lystra was in a measure prepared for the message, and found healing in it, the multitude was far different. There was a common belief among ancient people that the gods occasionally visited the earth. A temple to Jupiter was in Lystra. What more reasonable, from their standpoint, than that the great Jupiter should visit his people and that Mercury, who was represented as attending him on his journeys, should be with him, for Mercury was the messenger, the servant of the gods? Seeing the lame man healed, the populace acclaimed Barnabas and Paul as Jupiter and Mercury and attempted to offer sacrifice to them. How pitiful it seems, their longing for a personal knowledge and sight of God, yet their souls so blinded by superstition that many of them could not see Him of whom Paul spoke: the Word Made Flesh who had so shortly before "come down in the likeness of men."

Among those who did see, however, were Eunice, Lois and Timothy. Paul suffered cruel persecution at Lystra but in Timothy he gained a son in the Lord.

The incidents of Paul's stay in Lystra are often used to illustrate the fickleness of a crowd. First the visitors were greeted as gods, then persecuted. So Christ had been hailed king one week, crucified the next.

From Lystra Paul and Barnabas went to Derbe. There they made many disciples and then began the journey home. They visited, on the return, the churches they had established, exhorting the members and appointing elders to carry on the work. It was a great, a brave journey: bravely begun, bravely ended.

This unflinching courage is, perhaps, the great personal lesson to be found in our chapter. We can find here, too, examples of various kinds of "healing," illustrating the lesson to be found in Christ's parable of the sower. One man heard Paul and his hearing brought healing to his crippled body. A large number heard and were only confirmed in their own ignorance, folly and sin. Timothy heard and became "My true child in the faith," "My beloved child."

"He that hath ears to hear, let him hear. Matt 13:9.

A VISIT TO HARTFORD, CONN.

To the Editor of The News-Herald: I am always glad to see a communication in your paper from our absent ones so I thought inasmuch as I have been absent from the good old town of Morganton for about six weeks it would not be amiss for me to give a little account of the country and cities it has been my good fortune to visit.

I left Morganton June 25, my destination being Hartford. Stopped over in Washington two days, had a pleasant afternoon with Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Boger. Continuing my trip I arrived in Hartford June 28 and was met by my granddaughter who resides there, and was soon in her home. For the first few days it was very warm—94 on the Fourth of July. There was a fine display of fireworks on that evening and I took it in. Hartford is a beautiful city and has as fine a capital building as any State, if not the finest; also the State library and Supreme court building combined. I met the librarian, who asked me about our former librarian, Mr. Miles O. Sherrill; said they had met frequently.

The people are proud of their city and all work harmoniously in trying to make it beautiful. This place is the greatest insurance center in the United States. Many strong companies and fine buildings and more buildings are going up. Here they have some of the largest department stores of any city of its size.

This is a city of parks, the most notable one for size is Keny park, containing 673 acres. The next largest being Colt, 106 acres; Elizabeth, 100 acres; Pope, 83 acres. They have many more parks. I only mention these on account of their enormous size. The Elizabeth park, the American Rose society declares, is to be the most handsome rose garden in the world, containing 275 varieties and 10,000 rose plants. This is a great manufacturing place —manufacturing almost every kind of goods in steel and iron. I was fortunate enough, through a foreman of one of the departments of the Underwood Typewriter Co., to go through and take a look at the way they are made. But as it is impossible to tell anything as to work will say they occupy large buildings—their floor space would cover eight acres of ground. Their output is 70 typewriters an hour, and employ, when on full time, 5,000 men and women. Have seating capacity in dining room for 1,700 men and women; waiting room, hospital and trained nurse ready for emergency.

For fear I have taxed your space with too much non-interesting matter, will only say it is entirely different from our Southland in regard to making acquaintances. But when you do get acquainted they can't do enough for you. Would say in conclusion, give me old North Carolina to live in, and if I was correctly informed there are not many in Burke whose estate would furnish enough to be buried in one of the cemeteries where such men as the Morgans are buried.

A few days ago I visited the Hale peach orchard belonging to the "Peach King." It contains 500 or more acres and the peaches are now being picked. I enjoyed eating as many as I wanted and bought some to take back. They were very reasonable, only $1.50 for 16 quarts, as they sell everything up here by the quart.

The Connecticut river runs through Hartford and boats from New York leave here every day. I went to Springfield, Mass., a distance of 25 miles on the west side and came back on the east side. Large tobacco farms on both sides of the river for the 25 miles and the same way down on both sides of the river to Middletown, which is about the same distance to Springfield. W. A. ROSS, Hartford, Conn., Aug. 8, 1921.

WAS THIS HEN A RIP VAN WINKLE?

For The News-Herald: In my article you published July 7th I told of the disappearance of a hen in April that I supposed had been stolen. I am not sure that it disappeared in April; it may have been during the first half of May. Let that be as it may, there is the greatest mystery connected with that hen's history that has ever, to my knowledge, been given to the reading public. About the 15th of July that missing hen returned home after an absence of more than two months. She was as poor as Job's turkey. Her tail feathers were all gone and the rear part of her anatomy was destitute of feathers. Before leaving home I'm sure she would have weighed six or seven pounds. When she returned I don't believe she would have weighed three pounds. She was so weak that, when another hen would attempt to fight her, she would fall to the ground and was scarcely able to get on her feet again. Where was she during all this time, is the puzzling question. After pondering over the matter more than two weeks, the most reasonable conclusion that I have been able to arrive at is that she must have had a Rip Van Winkle sleep. MRS. C. P. HILL.

WORN NERVES.

Nervous troubles, with headache, dizzy spells, queer pains and irregular 'kidneys,' give reasons to suspect kidney weakness and to try the remedy that has helped your neighbors. Ask your neighbor. Mrs. A. Keever, Alpine Cotton Mills, Morganton, says: "I suffered a great deal with my back. I had headaches and at times was very nervous. My kidneys acted irregularly and caused annoyance. Reading of the benefit other people received from Doan's Kidney Pills I bought a box at Leslie's Drug Store. I got wonderful relief, they eased the pains across the small of my back and made my kidneys act regularly. Now, whenever I feel any return of the trouble, I take Doan's Kidney Pills. Price 60c. at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Keever had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y."
