

MATTERS of INTEREST to FARMERS

College's Farm News Service Is First in Nation

Daily and weekly farm news service provided by N. C. State College Extension Service has again been recognized as first in the nation.

The award was made recently at Minneapolis during an annual meeting of the American Association of Agricultural College Editors at the University of Minnesota, and marks the second straight year this honor has been won by N. C. State College.

In addition to the news service award, the annual report of the Extension Service, also was judged a first-place or blue ribbon winner, and the college's special features received second place award.

Headed by Frank H. Jeter, the Extension News service prepares approximately 40 pages of news weekly for daily and weekly newspapers. In addition, special feature stories are prepared weekly along with on-the-spot developments of agricultural happenings.

Pastures Needed To Supplement The Grain Shortage

Faced with a National grain supply that will be 700 million bushels short of last year's production, North Carolina dairymen are asked by Extension Agronomy and Animal Husbandry specialists at State College to grow more fall and winter pastures.

It has been proved that grain, silage, and hay can be saved by fall and winter pastures, they say, and every pound of nutrients provided by pasture saves buying a pound in the feed sack.

Since many farmers and dairymen will want to extend their grazing season this year, the Extension Service has prepared a small circular for general distribution which offers recommendations on what to seed, when to seed, and analyses and amounts of fertilizer to use.

The 1947 agricultural conservation program provides payments for establishing or improving permanent pastures amounting to about 80 per cent of the cost of the seed. Even though a farmer may have already carried out practices to the extent approved for this farm, special provision has been made whereby the payment for any farm can be increased an additional amount to cover approximately 80 per cent of the seed used in seeding up to 5 acres of permanent pasture, or for seeding ryegrass to be used for grazing.

Copies of the circular may be obtained upon request to: Agricultural Editor, State College Station, Raleigh, Please request Extension Circular 310, entitled "Fall, Winter, and Spring Grazing To Save Grain Feed."

TIMELY FARM QUESTIONS

Answered at State College

Question: How can I lengthen the life of workstock harness?
Answer: Giving long life to harness is simple. All that is necessary is to keep it clean and well oiled with a good harness oil. Best results are attained by taking the harness apart, unbuckling all straps, washing them with a very mild soap and warm water, rinsing each strap as washed in clean water and hanging up to dry. By the time one is through, the first straps will be dry enough to oil. A sponge or soft rag will hold enough oil to make hand rubbing effective. Most farmers take their harness to harness repair shops where it is oiled by being placed in a wire basket and dipped in a large tank of warm harness oil for 15 to 20 minutes, then suspended above the vat until oil drains off. This is fairly effective, but the man who takes his harness apart and washes it thoroughly before it is oiled gets a much better job: for dried sweat and dirt prevent oil from penetrating to the leather beneath.

Repairing promptly, likewise, adds greatly to life. Longer life of harness also is obtained where harness is hung in a harness room away from the ammonia fumes rising from stalls; but this seldom is considered practical for lack of time, and harness generally is hung on a peg on the wall about 8 feet behind the work animal it is used on.

Question: What are some recommended seeding rates of pasture mixtures including ladino clover?
Answer: Ten to twelve pounds of orchard grass is generally recommended in a mixture with 2 to 3 pounds of ladino clover on all well drained soils. Fifteen pounds of dallis seed is recommended on the poorly drained soils of the Coastal Plain area where orchard grass is not adapted. The dallis grass should be established in the early spring before seeding ladino clover in the fall. On these poorly drained soils 4 to 6 pounds of red top grass may be seeded with the ladino. Tall fescue is showing considerable promise as a perennial pasture grass in the state and apparently can be substituted for any of the above grasses.

Ten to twelve pounds of tall fescue and 2 to 3 pounds of ladino clover should produce a satisfactory stand. Ladino clover should be seeded September 1-15 except in the mountains where it is seeded in August or April.

State College Hints To Farm Homemakers

Cleaning Paper Lampshades. Skim-milk is a good cleaner for paper lampshades, both those of unfinished paper and those with a shellac, varnish or waxlike finish, according to home management specialists of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. Do not use water on paper shades because it softens and may break, or damage the paper. Milk, on the other hand, does not penetrate paper readily because of its casein content. It slips over the surface carrying soil with it.

A small amount of milk poured on the shade and rolled around cleans many papers well. As the milk dries with dirt, a fresh supply should be used. Sponging the milk on with a soft cloth hastens the cleaning. However, if the cloth roughens the paper, this method should not be used.

The casein in milk is a rather gelatinous material that picks up and absorbs dirt. Cleaning with milk leaves a slight finish on the paper shade.

The first step in cleaning the shade is to dust inside and out with a soft clean cloth, soft brush or hand vacuum cleaner. Then sponge the surface very lightly with a cloth dipped in milk, using about a fourth cupful for a large shade. Support the shade by placing it on a table and

Farm and Home Week Now in Full Swing
More than 5,000 farm men and women, representing every county in the State, were expected to gather at State College this week to attend the 40th Annual Session of Farm and Home Week.

Never has this always-looked-forward-to event promised so much in the form of entertainment, information and inspiration as the one this year.

The North Carolina Extension Service and cooperating agencies have tried to provide the people attending this year's event with an array of farm exhibits, demonstrations in farming and homemaking, and discussions on helpful farm and home practices.

Internationally known speakers including General Dwight D. Eisenhower and Miss Dorothy Thompson are scheduled to speak during the week. General Eisenhower will speak in Riddick Stadium, Thursday night, August 28 at 8:00. Miss Thompson is scheduled to speak at the twenty-second Annual Meeting of the North Carolina Federation of Home Demonstration Clubs on the same day. Her address will be in Raleigh's Memorial Auditorium at 10:30 a. m.

Beginning August 25 and continuing through August 29, each day is being filled with all forms of activities. It will be a busy week, indeed, say those who have planned the program but a week that will be remembered for many years by those who attend.

In the first 11 months of the season, mills used about 9.4 million bales of cotton.

Like to travel... with expenses paid?

MAYBE it's travel you want—in exotic foreign lands. Or thrilling adventure along new frontiers in electronics, aviation, medical science. Perhaps the chance to learn a useful, modern skill.

If you are 18 to 34 (17 with parents' consent) and otherwise qualified, you can get them all in the Regular Army. Yes, it's true: only 3 out of 5 applicants are good enough to make it. That means you'll serve your country with an outfit you can be proud of.

Study the pay chart below. That pay is clear. You don't pay a cent for food, lodging, clothing. Sound good? Then—get the full facts today at your nearest U. S. Army Recruiting Station.

hold it by the top wires, turning as you clean in order not to bend the paper. Use a fresh cloth and fresh milk as either shows soil. The milk should not stand on the shade or moisten the glue. If the milk seems to be softening the paper, allow the shade to dry before continuing. A very soiled shade may need a second application after it dries.

Be careful with shades made of two layers of paper. If soil has seeped in between the layers, cleaning the lining with milk may leave streaks.

Wholesale and packer stocks of canned vegetables carried over from 1946 are much above last year's low stocks. Green pea and tomato stocks appear unusually large.
