DOUBLE TRACK.

The Southern Will Put it Down Between High Point and Greensboro.

High Point is getting its shape now to have all the railroad facilities it needs. Besides the new movements for railroad and car lines, the Southern will make improvement.

The Southern Railway Company has awarded the contract for the construction of the double track from this city to High Point, and the work will begin as soon as the weather will permit and the material can be secured. The line is already double tracked from here to Pomona, three miles of the way, and for some time the north- and south-bound trains have been using separate tracks.

From here to High Point is considered one of the worst congested parts of the entire system, and it will be a great day for the railroad company when this part of the road is double tracked. The contract for double tracking the road between Danville, Va., and Pelham, N. C., has been previously awarded and it will be built as soon as possible. This is done in order to give better service over the Western which leaves the main line at Stokesland, four miles this side of Danville.

It is understood that as soon as these two sections of the road are completed the contract for constructing the double track over the remaining part of the road between Danville and Spencer will be awarded. This means that in the next few months the main line of the Southern Railway leading both directions from Greensboro will be double tracked.

The Southern Railway is keeping pace with the march of progress in the South, and it can truthfully be said that it has been one of the most important factors in the development of the fairest part of Uncle Sam's domain.

Warning.

It is a misdemeanor to drive over the new roads until opened by the supervisor, and Mr. Johnston hereby gives notice that he will enforce the law. This is a warning to all people to keep off the new road in course of construction.

REGULAR FUSILLADE.

Ten Shots Exchanged Between John Cecil and Drunken Negro.

Thursday at 1 o'clock a drunken negro from Winston rode up at Bodenhamer's stable and began to raise a row with the proprietor. In the melee the negro dropped his hat and as John Cecil started to hand it to him the negro opened fire on Mr. Cecil. The negro shot twice before Mr. Cecil could get his pistol out. After that there was a regular fusillade, ten shots being fired at rather close range. The negro went down the railroad and has not been seen since. As far as is known, no one was hurt.

Mr. Davis Buys.

Mr. Dougan Davis bought forty acres of land Friday from Arthur Bodenhamer, situated two and one half miles up Salem road.

The Enterprise congratulates the boys in the eastern part of the city on their good music. They have organized a band.

Pythian Big Meeting.

A program was carried out consisting of informal discussions, experiences, etc. The address of the evening was delivered by Whitehead Klutz, of Salisbury, N. C., son of Congressman Theo. F. Klutz. This address was one of rare merit and strength. Mr. Klutz is a young orator of as much promise as any young man in North Carolina, and with gifts both natural and acquired, which are calculated to make him a power in the future citizenship of the State.

Fruits and cigars were enjoyed by those present and a stronger bond of fraternalism was formed by the social session.

North State Telephone Company.

There was a meeting of the North State Telephone Company at the Mayor's office last night. The meeting was presided over by Mr. M. J. Wrenn. E. D. Steele acted as secretary.

The charter was accepted, the by-laws approved. Five directors were elected as follows: E. M. Armfield, C. M. Hauser, J. F. Hayden, W. H. Ragan and J. P. Redding. The officers of the company will be elected by the board of directors today.

The plans of the company are to enlarge the service by extending the lines. There are one hundred stockholders, all High Point citizens.

The capital is $20,000 paid in, with an authorized capital of $50,000.

It is expected that J. F. Hayden will continue to manage the exchange.

Lot Sold.

Mr. M. P. Craven has sold his lot on the new street fronting Pickett's factory to Mr. W. I. Montgomery, who will build there this spring.

Resolutions of Respect.

The following resolutions were adopted by Guilford Council No. 23, Jr. O. U. A. M., March 3d, 1905:

Whereas, It has been the decree of Divine Providence to send protracted affliction upon our brother, C. H. Barnes, which finally ended in death, and our brother has been carried from a world of care and troubles to the realms of bliss beyond, therefore be it resolved

That while we bow in humble submission to the wise dispensation of an overruling Providence, in the death of Brother Barnes our Council loses a good and faithful member;

That this Council deeply deplores the loss, and extends to the bereaved wife and relatives its deepest sympathy and trusts that God's love may heal the wound and fill the aching void;

That through this providence of God we hope the bereaved wife and relatives will realize that God's will, not ours, be done; that the deceased has gone to the land of rest where sorrows come no more and bliss eternal reigns;

That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, and to the High Point Enterprise and Weekly Ledger for publication, and also spread upon the minutes of the Council.

FOR THE LITTLE ONES.

"Little Peter," the Bird That Spends His Life on the Water.

"Little Peter" is the real name of the petrel or bird that lives on the sea. The harder the storm the better he likes it, and the more noise the sea makes the louder he cries.

The sailors, who are all so jolly, never like to meet a petrel. They are so dismal in their coal black coats, and seamen think they bring them ill luck too.

You could not guess how the petrel sleeps. He first makes of himself a feather ball and sits on the water, just as your canary does on his perch.

Why doesn't he sink? Because his feathers are so oily he can't.

These birds grow so fat that to the poor islanders in very cold countries they are invaluable. After they are dead a wick is drawn through their bodies and set on fire, and you can hardly believe how well this queer kind of lamp lights up their huts.

The petrel never goes on shore except to build her nest, which is hidden snugly away between rocks or in the sand. There she lays her one egg and brings up her baby. All day the petrel lives on the water, but she never forgets at night to feed it.

Sometimes petrels are called "Mother Carey's chickens." If you ever go across the water, you may see them some day.—Montreal Star.

How Turkish Children Are Trained.

Little Turks are trained to be soldiers, every inch of them. A little Turk eats whatever is given him, obeys without a murmur, works like a horse at whatever task is set before him, walks till he drops down draws water for his own food, cuts his own wood, takes care of his own horse and sleeps on the ground without even giving the smallest sign of impatience. He is even taught to do this without moving a muscle of his face to show that he does not like such hard work. What about the little boys in civilized countries who pout because they have to go on errands and who refuse to eat porridge for breakfast?

A Sweet Comparison.

Little Harriet went the other day with mamma to see Nurse Charlotte's black baby. When they arrived, the fat little pickaninny was in his bath, and only his woolly head and little fat shoulders were visible above the white suds. The contrast was startling and seemed to strike Harriet so, for when she came home and we asked what she thought of the baby she said, with a doubtful look, "He looked like a little chocolate drop wif the cream on the outside." When Nurse Charlotte heard it, no one laughed more than she.

It Didn't Matter.

A little lad had climbed a very high spout attached to his parents' house to get a nest which had been built by some birds. He was successful and was walking away with his companions when a gentleman who had watched his dangerous feat stopped him and said: "My little fellow, I am sorry to see you risk your life for such a paltry thing. What would have happened if the spout had given way?"

"Oh," said the lad, "it wouldn't have mattered much. We're going to leave the house tomorrow."

The Old Fifteen Puzzle.

Take fifteen equal size square bits of cardboard and number them 1, 2, 3, etc. Scatter them in a square like this:

One space is left vacant. Now, how many boys and girls can arrange these figures in consecutive order from 1 to 15, leaving the lower right hand corner vacant, without taking up a single piece, but simply shoving the pieces along a space at a time?

The "Dogma's" Pupils.
A teacher in Missouri is trying to give a better understanding of the use of words. After explaining the meaning of the word "dogma" to her pupils she wrote it on the blackboard and asked her pupils to compose sentences containing the word. One little girl came in too late for the definition, but concluded to take her part in the exercises nevertheless. Her sentence was as follows: "Our dogma has three puppies."

There is a remedy over sixty years old—Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Of course you have heard of it, probably have used it. Once in the family, it stays; the one household remedy for coughs and hard colds on the chest. Ask your doctor about it.

"I have had pneumonia three times, and Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has brought me safely through each time. I have just recovered from my last attack, aged sixty-seven. No wonder I praise it."—E. Y. HIGGINS, Stevens Point, Wis.

AMUSING BLUNDERS.

Some Queer Slips That Have Been Made by Famous Writers.

The writer of an article in the Yorkshire Post recalls some amusing literary blunders. Translators contribute largely to the list of mistakes, and the inspired lack of accuracy of our Gallic neighbors when dealing with things English is proverbial. Victor Hugo in "Les Travailleurs de la Mer" translates "the Firth of Forth" by the words "Premier des quatre." Then there is the priceless translation that gave Gibber's play, "Love's Last Shift," the title "La Dernière Chemise de l'Amour."

Chaucer in his tale of Troilus makes Pandarus refer to Robin Hood. One writer records the fact that Virgil placed Aeneas in a harbor which had no existence at that time, "the blunder being about the same as if a modern poet were to make Columbus pass through the Suez canal."

Mediaeval romance teems with anachronisms, "Orlando Furioso," Ariosto's great poem, taking the prize for reckless disregard of chronology. In this work Charlemagne and Edward, king of England; Henry, duke of Clarence, and other mis-mated celebrities enjoy each other's company. The Moors are settled in Spain at least 300 years before the Saracens invited them, while Pester John, who died in 1202, and Constantine the Great, dead in 337, figure gayly in these daring pages.

Schiller in his "Piccolomini" refers to lightning conductors 150 years before they were invented, and Shakespeare, whose genius included a happy gift of inaccuracy, is generous in blunder. In "Julius Caesar" the clock, a luxury unknown to the Romans, is the subject of conversation between Brutus and Cassius. "Peace," says Brutus, "count the clock." Cassius: "The clock has stricken 3." It must have been several hundred years after the death of Caesar that striking clocks were invented. Cervantes is responsible for making the company at the Crescent tavern sit down twice to supper on the same evening, a jovial mistake that savors of hospitality and good cheer.

To Charles Dickens we owe gratitude for many a delicious blunder—to Mr. Squeers for setting his boys to work to hoe turnips in midwinter and to the girl, Tattycoram, in "Little Dorrit," who enters "with an iron box two feet square under her arm."

It was a Glasgow paper that described this unique shipping disaster: "The captain swam ashore, as did also the stewardess. She was insured for £3,000 and carried 200 tons of pig iron."

The English Servant.

The English servant requires to be studied. The world's other servants are mere amateurs; the English servant has a trade. As an American I proceeded to treat mine as an American, and I made by first blunder. A sensible American is, if not friendly with her servants, at least friendly. The English woman, if she is sensible, presents to her servants a surface of perfect indifference, and then she has peace, for the English servant despises a considerate and kindly mistress as not knowing her place. The most difficult thing for a stranger to learn is that impalpable line between the different servants' duties. If one does not enumerate what one expects of them when they are hired, afterward it is too late. They have, however, a rough sense of honor, and they generally do what they agree to.—Mrs. F. Lane in "The Razzar."
