A certain countess, the daughter of a general in the French army and a goddaughter of his royal highness the late Duc d'Anjou, in the possession of a property in Paris. Married at the age of eighteen, she was a widow at twenty-one. Her husband committed suicide, having gambled away his fortune, which brought him $3,000 a year. The countess is said to be heiress to a fortune of $50,000, but there are other claimants to the money, and she has already spent more than $1,000 in law costs. Being a woman of energy, she started a dressmaking establishment, in which she employed twenty girls. The undertaking was not a financial success, so she gave it up. In her laundry she employs only two or three women, and, though she does not do the actual washing, she helps in the ironing and in delivering the linen to her customers.—Exchange.

Red Tape at Mount Vernon.

"Years ago," said Henry McBride, "I was fond of a pilgrimage to Mount Vernon, and many a time I journeyed there to revel in the beauty of the old place, so rich in historical associations. Today Mount Vernon isn't half as enjoyable as it was in earlier times. The air of red tape, of ceremony and convention prevails now to such an extent that it robs one of half the pleasure of his visit. A man is not even allowed to smoke a cigar on the grounds, and he must confine himself to such a rigid programme that he is all the while alarmed lest he be called down for violating some rule. Maybe these things are necessary, but somehow it grates on those of us who recall the period when people could go there and find no such restrictions as exist at present."—Washington Post.

Passing of the Veterans.

Grant was a general. So were Hayes and Garfield and Harrison. McKinley was a major. Since Andrew Johnson all the presidents, except Arthur and Cleveland, down to Roosevelt, were soldiers of the civil war. McKinley was the last. The civil war veteran has passed from the president's office to return no more. Senator Bate was perhaps the last of the old Confederates in the senate from Tennessee. He is also the last of the old school of southern gentlemen who link the past with the present. Turney was the last Confederate to serve as governor. It is doubtful whether another old Confederate will be elected governor, senator or representative.—Nashville American.

An Indoor Snowstorm.

"The past winter was a cold one," said the laundress. "In our laundry it actually snowed indoors one day. The laundry was hot and full of steam at the time. The moist, heavy air would have registered, I fancy, more than 90 degrees. All of a sudden some one opened the wide doors, and in there rushed great volumes of pure, dry air that registered only a little over zero. The result of this sudden cold was that the steam in the laundry froze suddenly and descended on us girls in big, soft, white flakes. 'An indoor snowstorm!' we shrieked. 'An indoor snowstorm!' 'It was indeed a pretty and rare sight.'—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Imitation Hen's Eggs.

It is stated that a Paris chemist has succeeded in producing a passable artificial imitation of a hen's egg. The shell is made with a blowpipe from a moist combination of lime and bismuth. The white of the egg is made of sulphur carbon and beef fat, and the yolk is composed of a mixture of beef blood and magnesia, colored with chrome yellow. It does not sound very enticing, but as the new eggs will doubtless arrive here before long people will be able to judge of their merits for themselves if they can muster up courage to taste one.—London Globe.

Mr. Shaw Objects to Starch.

The London World of Dress has secured Bernard Shaw, the well known novelist and playwright, as a contributor to write on prevailing fashions. And he objects to starch. He will not wear a shirt smeared with disgusting white mud. Shiny white tubes on the wrist repel him, and the rain pipe trouser leg arouses his wrath. Why should a man be ashamed to give evidence of his knees in his trousers? Knees are made to be bent. Trousers are made for knees.

Marriage in England.

Marriage has been declared in England for twenty years. In 1893 the divorce was so certain that nothing like it had been known. With the failure of marriage insurance has fallen to 20 per cent out of every $100,000, and the number of divorces has increased to 10,000 a year.

Wine of Cardinal Cured Her

318 South Pike Street, ATLANTA, GA., March 31, 1908.

"I suffered for four months with extreme nervousness and lassitude. I had a sinking feeling in my stomach which no medicine seemed to relieve, and losing my appetite I became weak and lost my vitality. In three weeks I lost fourteen pounds of flesh and felt that I must find speedy relief to regain my health. Having heard Wine of Cardinal praised by several of my friends, I sent for a bottle and was certainly very pleased with the results. Within three days my appetite returned and my stomach troubles ran no more. I could digest my food without difficulty and the nervousness gradually diminished. Nature performed her functions without difficulty and I am once more a happy and well woman."

The Inter-Urban.

Mr. H. T. C. Bryant, writing to the Charlotte Observer, says:

"The High Point Inter-Urban Railway Company is the name of the concern that proposes to build an electric line from here to High Point.

"The distance from Winston-Salem to High Point by the Southern Railway, via Greensboro, is forty-three miles, but the direct route, which the electric car would go, is only twenty miles. There would be a saving of $2.40 cents each trip south. The promoters claim that the people of this city would give enough in railroad fares and hotel bills in a year to pay the entire bond issue. The trolley line would put Winston in direct touch with the outside world, for when the cars are in operation an hourly schedule will be maintained.

"On the 3d day of May Winston township will vote on bonds for the road, and the proposition seems to be a fair one, for the company offers to invest $10 to every $1, invested by the township, making the sum for the township $37,500, the bonds not to be delivered until the road is complete and in operation.

"The men behind this movement are of the right kind of stuff to make it go. They say that it will pay; other roads, although not so favorably located, are paying. The location as relative to High Point, Winston and Salem is most convenient and the road offers better advantages and promises better results than almost any other road in the South.

"The road will run through a fine farming section, including portions of Guilford and Forsyth counties. The talk of building the road has enhanced the value of land along the line. Great quantities of wheat, corn and other crops are grown in the territory adjacent to the survey line of the proposed road, and with the road in operation truck farms would grow and flourish.

"High Point and Winston-Salem are two of North Carolina's greatest manufacturing towns. They are full of wealthy capitalists and prosperous working men. An electric line would connect them and make them twin cities in course of time. The triangle between Greensboro and Winston and High Point, would blossom into the garden spot of the State. This trolley car project means much more than one would at first think. There are more than 70,000 people in High Point and 30,000 in the Twin-City and its suburbs.
