

Consumption

Salt pork is a famous old-fashioned remedy for consumption. "Eat plenty of pork," was the advice to the consumptive 50 and 100 years ago.

Washington Letter.

Special Cor. The Courier. Not long ago Mrs. John A. Logan, writing in the New York American, said that there was not one decent play on the American stage today.

Speaking of commercialism run riot, there is now a movement on foot in the national capital to increase the salary of the President of the United States from $50,000 to $100,000 a year.

Buncombe County's Good Roads.

A visitor to the beautiful city of Asheville cannot fail to be impressed with the charm and indeed the practical value of the macadam roads that are being constructed under the intelligent supervision of the Board of County Commissioners of Buncombe county.

The representatives of all the foreign nations in the national capital are hating themselves and each other over the Venezuelan situation. President Roosevelt is the first President of the United States who ever began the attempt to define the Monroe Doctrine, and his definition thereof entia the purposes of the foreign nations who are anxious to exploit the countries of South America.

The establishment of the M. P. College, to be located, it is to be held open for 60 days. Greensboro and Henderson are bidding for it, each having raised nearly $10,000.

Coleman Cotton Mills, in Davie county, is to install a 1,000 horse power engine in addition to the two local industries on the Seaboard Air Line, Raleigh being among the localities that take large tonnage, go, Randolph, High Point, Pomona, Greensboro, Rainsboro, Winston and sundry points on the Southern Railway.

In this connection Mr. McGregor thinks that his company will prove a veritable deliverance to this section, expressing the opinion that with the evolution of the plans now under contemplation, $150 coal will not only be possible, but practically assured, thus setting the secret of cheap fuel. It is quite certain, says Mr. McGregor, that this would be possible through no other channel than the Raleigh and Western and that road should receive the support of every enterprise in consequence, both as a medium of securing reduction in the cost of coal and competitive transportation.

Reading Prof. Shaw's article in last week's Argus forcibly reminded us that once upon a time we read a story entitled "A Day's Transformation." Here was a poor girl, red head and freckled, and as a consequence to be almost a fright. But she was sharp and clever and worked her way to a skillful oculist and had an operation performed on her eyes that made them straight and washed off the freckles and combed her hair and there was where the transformation came in. The end was a rich husband and city life. Now we thought and wondered if it were possible that the Republicans had been so cross-eyed all this time that they could not tell a white man from a colored one and that last election acted like an operation had been performed on their eyes, and can now distinctly see the difference between white and black. It strikes us as being this way: The Democrats deceived the negro down when they disfranchised him, now the Republicans have jumped on him to stamp the life out of him. Well, we declare we believe the world is coming to an end!

And then Mr. Simmons wants to let Pritchard down easy, he's afraid a too sudden fall will injure his backbone. Well, that shows his goodness of heart. But we set down to give our representative a slap of our hand before they started down to Raleigh. We want that "dog" law passed this time.

Two years ago we opposed it with all our might and some who have dogs found it out and took it for granted that we were friends to them and would protect them in all their madness and they just tried themselves in our milk-house. They even knaved the sills from under to get in. We exterminated some, but others were too smart for us so we had to finally put up a ghost at the spring to scare them away. That settled them. But we want them killed out for what they have done.

Mountainous North Carolina. A new and interesting topographic map, known as the Nantahala sheet, recently issued by the United States Geological survey, is one of a part of the rugged western section of North Carolina, showing portions of the country drained by the Little Tennessee and Nantahala rivers. The region is sparsely settled, being little more than a mountain wilderness with a few scattered Highland villages. On the sheet appear the peaks or heads of the Nantahala mountains, Tusquis, Nalley River, and Cherokee ridges. The elevations of these mountains are significantly shown by a system of contours or lines passing through points of equal elevations at intervals of 100 feet, by which means also even the small ravines are clearly brought out. All the drainage features of the region and all the roads and settlements, are indicated. The map is obtainable at the national government store.

The Raleigh & Western to go to Greensboro, Also Purchased Cumrock Coal Mine.

Mr. Andrew Joyner, in his Greensboro correspondence sent out recently, reports an interview with Mr. G. C. McGregor, chief engineer of the Raleigh & Western railroad.

Mr. McGregor says that the surveyed line from its connection with the Seaboard Air Line at Colon, 39 miles southward of Raleigh, to Greensboro, has been finally located and adopted; that of this line eight miles additional to the Greensboro mines are now in operation, and 15 miles additional toward Greensboro are now graded; that two iron bridges of 160 feet span each, one for use at Cumrock, the other at Rainsboro, at both of which points the line crosses Deep River, have been bought and are now on the ground ready for erection.

The location of the line has been made with a view of offering all possible accommodation at the various industries along the route, while the alignment and grades are all favorable for economic operation.

Mr. McGregor admits that while the North he was informed that the railway company had arranged to acquire the Cumrock coal mines and open them up on a large scale, presumably by sinking a shaft of large proportions that will provide for an output of at least 1,200 tons per day, the object being to supply coal to adjacent markets to the extent of demand and convert into coke all the surplus. This plan, he states, was adopted only after a thorough canvass of the coal requirements of the section through which the road will be built and a thorough investigation of the probable cost of producing the coal on a large scale.

Such of the present products of those mines as are not shipped to local industries on the Seaboard Air Line, Raleigh being among the localities that take large tonnage, go, Randolph, High Point, Pomona, Greensboro, Rainsboro, Winston and sundry points on the Southern Railway. The demand is far in excess of the present yield, but with capacity increased and the Raleigh & Western Railway completed, it is believed that the entire output of the mines will be absorbed by industries on the rails of this company.

In this connection Mr. McGregor thinks that his company will prove a veritable deliverance to this section, expressing the opinion that with the evolution of the plans now under contemplation, $150 coal will not only be possible, but practically assured, thus setting the secret of cheap fuel. It is quite certain, says Mr. McGregor, that this would be possible through no other channel than the Raleigh and Western and that road should receive the support of every enterprise in consequence, both as a medium of securing reduction in the cost of coal and competitive transportation.

The time was, when it was held that by its honesty and independence and the loyalty of its citizens the United States could command the respect of other nations without a military and naval establishment equal in strength to the strongest. Evidently Mr. Roosevelt regards that time as passed.

It is somewhat of a commentary on the much vaunted honesty of the army that the transportation of troops across the Pacific can be more economically conducted by private concerns which must naturally figure on making a profit, than by the government through the War or Navy Department.

The railroads and big corporations are still lobbying vigorously to defeat the educational clause in the Immigration bill. They wish to import the cheapest class of labor in order to keep wages down and give them a horde of uneducated voters whose suffrage they can manipulate as they please.

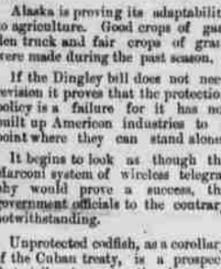

The Cuban treaty leaves 14 cents per pound protection against Cuban sugar to the best sugar manufacturers. Prominent republicans are expressing infectious surprise that the manufacturers are not satisfied with this amount. And yet, what man is satisfied with 80 per cent profit when he can just as well have 80 per cent?

It seems hardly reasonable to ask the government to grant subsidies to shipping companies and build up a navy with a view to increasing the foreign trade of the United States when every day United States consuls are reporting that because of the unwillingness of Americans to adapt themselves to the demands of the foreign trade they are losing custom they ought to control to the more accommodating Europeans.

In the eighty years since the Monroe Doctrine was first proclaimed, the navy of the United States has never equalled that of any of the great European powers and yet the doctrine has never been violated. The reason is plain. The United States feeds a large portion of Europe. Were Germany or England, for instance, to make war on the United States their armies would starve. All this talk about making our navy equal in strength to theirs is hogwash.
