INDIAN NAMES—AGAIN.

We publish with pleasure the following communication from a valued subscriber in Graham county. We are glad to find that our comments have aroused a responsive sentiment. Gross, and we may say contemptuous, injustice has been done the red men in the general ignoring of their existence in the very land in which as a remnant they still survive, and of service rendered in time of trouble by those from whom the reverse might have been expected; for the whites had sowed the wind, and they might expect to reap the whirlwind. Junaluske should not have been forgotten; for his services to the whites in the war of 1812 were unselfish, generous and great. Eoneguskee should not have been forgotten: for to him his tribe owes the check to the debauchery, idleness and drunkenness which were fast sweeping them away, put them on the paths of industry and sobriety, and gave one of the most striking illustrations of the capacity of the Indian for the reception of the arts and habits of civilization.

And apart from the question of the recognition of service, there is something due to propriety in the use and locality of names. There is a harsh solecism in the presence of anglo-no-moleculature when the original local names suggest themselves as the natural and proper ones. The names of Robbinsville and Charleston are as much out of place as that of John Smith or Peter Thompson would be inscribed on the face of the pyramid of Ghizeh.

We thank our correspondent for the addition to our list of Indian names. We hope others will interest themselves to increase it:

ROBBINSVILLE, N. C., Feb. 10, '86.

EDITORS CITIZEN:—I hope you will give me a little space in your valuable paper. I noticed in your issue of the 14th inst. an article under the head of "Our Nomenclature," which struck me with some force; and I wish to add the following to the list of Indian names retained in Graham, viz: Atoah, Talooah and Skeeah, (Little Cat). The English of the first two I do not know. I do think your suggestion in reference to Robbinsville and Charleston a good one. I see no good reason why Robbinsville should not be changed to Juraluska, after one of the greatest of his tribe. Robbinsville now stands on a part of the fine tract of land donated to him for his friendliness to the whites, and heroic deeds in the war of 1812. He lies, with his squaw (wife) within two hundred yards of the Junaluska hotel in Robbinsville, and shame ought to mantle the cheeks of the white man when he passes the place of his interment. There is not a stone to mark his resting place, nor to tell of his heroic deeds. Shame on us all.

HENRY WATTERSON.

The illness, perhaps the fatal one, of this brilliant journalist, has created a general solicitude throughout the country, for Mr. Waterson has made an impression rare in a time when impersonal journalism has become the rule. We know the New York World, the Sun, the Times; we know the journals, but do not know the editors. But we all know Henry Waterson, part and parcel of the Courier Journal, starting out in his individuality, head and shoulders above the vehicle which gives expression to his eloquence, his vigor, his vivacity and to his vast fund of information.

As a matter of information we briefly note the cause and character of his illness as we condense from the Courier Journal of the 16th:

On the night of the 7th of January Mr. Waterson addressed the Jackson Club at Columbus, Ohio. He spoke at some length and with great animation, and became much heated. He sat down without putting on his overcoat. It was at the beginning of the intensely cold January spell. He went to his room with a chill on him. He left the next day for Louisville, reaching the city at midnight, and finding no conveyance, walked to his office, a distance of more than a mile, in a temperature far below zero. His chill developed into illness, which has now taken the form of sub acute meningitis.

Of the various stages of his disease, the Courier Journal gives striking illustrations. In the first it says: "He grew worse slowly, but very surely. He was cheerful even in the presence of the demon of insomnia, and his always active mind was phenomenally alert and brilliant, his almost continuous conversation with the few callers who saw him being marvelous for its range of thought and the grace of its expression."

When Gen. Hancock died the storehouse of his mind was opened, he poured out story after story of the campaign of 1860. And of the last it says: "Mr. Waterson is in the third stage, the indications of which are somnolence, the most marked in his case, temporary paralysis of certain facial muscles, dilatation of the pupils of the eyes and slowness and irregularity of the pulse. Contrary to the popular notion, the disease seldom leaves any trace upon those who recover. The result is awaited with intense interest."

CONGRESS.

SENATE: Mr. Edmunds reported the resolutions from the Judiciary committee, expressing condemnation of Attorney General Garland and the executive, (published already in the CITIZEN) with a long report. The report was signed by Messrs. Edmunds, Ingalls, McMillan, Hoar, Wilson, Ewatts, Mr. Pugh of Alabama gave notice of a minority report.

Among the petitions presented in the Senate and appropriately referred was one by Mr. Hoar from the "Citizens of the United States," "Citizens whose names," Mr. Hoar said, "seemed to indicate they were of foreign birth, praying for the submission by Congress to the several States of a proposed constitutional amendment abolishing the presidency."

HOUSE: The consideration of the Fitz John Porter case was taken up, and discussed by Phillips of New Jersey, Curtis of Pa., Warner of Ohio, and Bragg of Wisconsin, for the bill, and Cutcheon of Michigan against.

Mr. Bragg, of Wisconsin, who had demanded the previous question, withdrew, and again took the floor in support of the bill. He sharply criticized the personnel of the court which convicted Porter and its one-sided course in the trial, and accused McDowell of falsification in representing the report of Stonewall Jackson of the battle of August 30 to apply to Porter's movements of the 29th. Mr. Bragg said the gentleman from Michigan (Cutcheon) had taken the report of the second battle of Bull Run, read the report of the killed and wounded on the 29th of August, for the purpose of showing that there had been a general battle. If the gentleman had been disposed to be ingenious he would have stated that the heading of these reports was "casualties between August 18 and September 2."

Mr. Cutcheon decided that he had so stated in his speech. Mr. Bragg, "You took the table of figures from the heading that covered almost a month, and you have published it in your speech as evidence of the losses on August 29, and you, Republican constituents, who do not read anything but your speech in Republican newspapers, will think that a historical evidence of the war."

Mr. Cutcheon declared that the heading of the table showed, precisely what it was.

Mr. Bragg declined to yield, and Mr. Cutcheon asserted his right to reply, as he had been misquoted. Mr. Bragg, (advancing to the bar of House) "What you said, I state what the figures are." "Now exclaimed, Mr. Cutcheon, advancing in the space in front of speaker's desk, "you are trying to ram falsehood down the throat of this House. (applause on the Republican side.) Mr. Bragg: "I draw my own inferences as to your purposes, and (defiantly) I will repeat them if you desire." (Applause on the Democratic side.)

At this time there was a good deal of confusion and excitement in the House, and it was with difficulty that the voice of the speaker or the gentleman could be heard, but as the speaker rapped the House to order and stated to Mr. Cutcheon he must not interrupt Mr. Bragg without permission, the former indignantly exclaimed: "The gentleman must not falsify facts." "Ah!" was Mr. Bragg's retort, "I am glad I have driven that radical from under the Stanton petticoats, so that he has come to the front." Mr. Bragg continued in this vein, declining to yield to interruptions, and his manner being at times that of personal defiance toward the opponents of the bill.

A vote was finally reached and the bill passed, yeas 171, nays 113. The House then at 5:15 adjourned.

A Captain's Fortunate Discovery. Capt. Coleman, schr. Weymouth, plying between Atlantic City and N. Y., had been troubled with a cough so that he was unable to sleep, and was induced to try Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. It not only gave him instant relief, but allayed the extreme soreness in his breast. His children were similarly affected and a single dose had the same happy effect. Dr. King's New Discovery is now the standard remedy in the Coleman household and on board of the schooner.

An Over-Trained Servant.

(From the New York Evening Post.) A gentleman who had carefully trained up his servant in the way he should go, so that when in his wife's presence he might not depart from it, sent him with a box ticket for the theatre to the house of a young lady. The servant returned when the gentleman and wife were at dinner. He had, of course, been told in giving answers in certain cases to substitute the masculine for the feminine pronoun. "Did you see him?" asked the master. "Yes, sir," replied the servant. "He said he'd go with pleasure, and that he'd wait for you, sir." "What was he doing?" asked the wife carelessly. "Putting on his bonnet, ma'am," said the idiot.

The expulsion of Poles from Prussia is beginning to bear practical fruit of a most unwelcome nature. Many manufactures and merchants in Warsaw, Cracow, Lemberg, &c., have agreed among themselves to make reprisals by cutting off all business relations with their former German, and more particularly their Prussian correspondents, and by sending their orders to houses in other countries. And this seems to be only the beginning of a movement which can hardly fail to gain strength in the present excited state of public feeling.

Senator Edmunds, for the Judiciary committee, secured the passage of a resolution calling on the attorney general for papers on file in the department of justice, relating to the appointment of Solicitor General Goode. Mr. Edmunds stated that there had been with the committee charges against Goode, of a character which made it necessary to have some information from the department, showing the endorsements he had received, etc., before action could be taken.

The ways and means committee attempted to pass a resolution directing the chairman to call upon the Secretary of the Treasury for information as to the probable effect upon revenues of the Morrison tariff bill. The committee postponed until next Wednesday consideration of the bill.

PERSONAL. Our old neighbor and townsman Major Scott was on our streets yesterday, looking as young and spry as though he carried the weight of but two instead of four score years. The old man was being congratulated by all of his old friends, and when questioned as to the object of his visit, he said he had walked all the way from Grass Valley expressly to lay in a stock of that Great Cough Remedy, Symphyx. He said he thought both he and his old wife would have been dead long ago, had it not been for Symphyx, and that he had come himself to get the genuine article. Long may the old Major live.—Exchange.
