Mrs. Phoebe Chesley, Peterson, Clay county, Iowa, tells the following remark-sble story, the truth of which is vouched them. Pisgah like some gracious queen smiles in unclouded beauty on the tran-quil hills that lie around her. Scarcely more than a stone's throw is Table Rock a darksome, unapproachable looking mountain, with precipitous sides. Like tiny white doves that have nestled for lest amid the weary waste of mountain and plain, lie the towns of Greenville, Spartanburg, Laurens, Hendersonville, and Walhalia. How hard it is to realize that those white specks are not the abode of quict and soltinde, but bustling towns, filled with hustling, jostling, feverish humanity.
