I have used Ayer's Cherry Pectoral for over a year, and sincerely believe I should have been in my grave, had it not been for this medicine. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral saved my life.

Two years ago I took a very severe Cold which settled on my lungs. I consulted physicians, and took the remedies they prescribed, but failed to obtain relief until I began using Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Two bottles of this medicine completely restored my health.—Lizzie M. Allen, West Lancaster, Chio.

As a people the Dutch are not hand, some. There are handsome types, but they have come in with Plemish immigrations or by accidental admixture with some of the blonde tribes of north with some of the blonde tribes of north Germany. They are evidently not the old Batavians recognized in history 100 years before the Christian era, and, by a singular persistence of descent, perpetuated till the present day. This perseverance of ancient types through thousands of years of pestilence, of submergence, of desolating wars, of internacine contests, of successive immigrations, is one of the marvels of history. The Flemish type is characterized by length of nose, breadth of forehead, smallness of chin and shortness of face. The true Dutch type has length of nose, smallness of chin and shortness of face. The true Dutch type has length of nose, narrowness of forehead, thinness of feature, gauntness of body and often considerable length of limb. These details are subject to modifications. The types more nearly approaching it are those often seen in Denmark.

You can wander for days through the streets, museums and public places of Amsterdam, Harlem, The Hague and Rotterdam and not meet a handsome woman, young or old, unless she is a foreigner. The climate, like that of Boston, western north Carolina division.

General Passenger Dep't, 1

Short as well as long term. proves more trying to the gentler sex. This absence of personal attractiveness in young women and girls is not without a certain pathos. The faces of old women become thin as a blade, the nose sharp as a needle, the complexion preternatur-ally clear and white. There is no room for wrinkles on a surface so small and thin. Surmount this queer face with one thin. Surmount this queer face with one of the close fitting, white native caps, and put about it a quantity of the curious gold ornaments of the country, and you have a personal ensemble to be remembered.—Holland Cor. Superstitions of the Educated.

President Garfield, although a man of much sterling practical ability, whose life had been so full of hard experience, was afflicted with an unconquerable element of superstition. His faith in lucky and unlucky numbers was implicit. For many years certain combinations of figures haunted him, and he was constantly expecting ominous events to take place on certain dates, and although invariably disappointed, he never ceased to form fresh prognostications. Such traits of superstition are not so uncommon, even in this positivistic Nineteenth ceneven in this positivistic Nineteenth censerved at the shortest notice and at tury, as one is naturally inclined to sup-

There are as many hard headed, practical men of business to-day who would not start a fresh enterprise on a Friday as there are ignorant seamen who declare that the rats desert a ship only when she is doomed to sink. Thousands of well educated men and women there are who would feel insulted if accused of believing in ghosts, but who would frame any excuse for not sitting down at a table with twelve of their friends. As to the uneducated classes, superstition is as rampant among them as in the days when poor old women were set on the ducking stool. In a walk through any country village you will scarcely find a farm-house without its lucky horseshoe, its charm for corns and warts, its terror of crossed knives and broken looking glasses. -Ben: Perley Poore.

The Craze for Riches. Henry E. Abbey, the noted theatrical manager, is a slender man, who carrie himself well. He has a round, ruddy fac and black mustache. He is always car fully dressed. Mr. Abbey was original a jeweler, having learned the trade in l father's shop in a western town. He may be seen riding about the city, he favorite conveyance being a hanson Abbey has had his ups and downs, but through them he has preserved an it difference to wealth which is remarkable.

Chatting with me the other day said: "I cannot understand why men Furniture, Carpets, crazy to be rich. If a man has all wants I should think that would crazy to be rich. If a man has all I enough. I would rather be in the pla of one of the younger members of the Vanderbilt family than in the place of or of the elders. Take Prederick Vande bilt, for instance, with $8,000,000 or $10 000,000, which is ample. He has nothing to do but to enjoy himself, but Cornelius and William K., with $40,000,000 or $50,-000,000 apiece, have all the responsibility of keeping up the family name and transmitting their wealth unbroken to some-body who will maintain the family name and fortune. They are in trouble all the time, whereas the younger sons have nothing to do but to enjoy themselves." -New York Tribune.

Paris and Her Visitors. I heard it estimated to-day that the foreigners in Paris are spending $200,000 a day. I do not imagine this to be an extravagant calculation. The city is full of Americans and English, and the hotel where I am stopping has little else. Paris beautifies herself as much for the rest of the world as for her own people. She lives off her visitors, and her store windows are put up to catch the eye of the passer by. These great boulevards are lined with stores, which at night are il-luminated brilliantly, both outside and in. Lines of gas jets with reflectors are placed above the windows on the outside, so that they cast a strong blaze down upon the goods displayed. Nearly all the goods of the store, as a rule, are in the windows, and the interior is not to be Preserve Your Sight. entered except for purchase. Small stocks are carried, I judge, and as a general thing a first class Paris store is not more than twelve feet square inside. I except, of course, the grand establish-ment of the "Magazine du Louvre," and the "Bon Marche," which are like those of Macy's, in New York, Wannamaker's in Philadelphia, only larger.—Frank G. Carpenter in Cleveland Leader.

Courtesy of English Aristocrats. Every American who has traveled abroad knows that English men and women of established position are habitually brusque to strangers, inferiors, or equals, while in private houses they are sometimes capable of a cool impertinence which astonishes an American. A distinguished lady of fortune and position, who for years had made every properly accredited English man and woman welcome to her beautiful home and cultivated circle, passed three months at a well known English water cure with her invalid husband. In the house were several English people of rank, friends and relatives of whom she had entertained in this country. Not one of them recognized her existence in any way, not even by a "good morning" on the stairs or a bow in the gardens, their position being that they did not go to a "curo" to make acquaintances.
"In three months," said the lady, "the creaking of my own boots was the only cheerful sound I heard, and I was cured of a belief in the courtesy of the English peerage."—Harper's Bazar,

"Budweis" Lager Beer. Emanating from the Prospect Brewery,

The undersigned, at the request of the Technical Society, has completed an analysis of the "Budweis" Beer, brewed at Chas. Wolters' Prospect Brewery, in Philadelphia, which analysis exhibits the following results:

Specific gravity, Alcohol, 5,94₩c 4,92₩c Extract. Carbonic Acid, 0.20第6

This signifies that the "Budweis" Beer in its essential qualities is almost the exact counterpart of the best Imported Bohemian Beer.

A further examination, seeking adulterations, proves conclusively that it contains naught of that nature.
