H. M. FURMAN, J. D. CARROLL, J. D. CARROLL, Editors.

THURSDAY MORNING, JAN. 27 '87

The European sky is very cloudy. Bismarck has talked about war till Germany is ready for it, and her people will sustain him, whilst Boulanger sees in the wreaking of French vengeance, the hope of an imperial crown. There is a feverish excitement that war between France and Germany is inevitable. In a few days the latter will demand of France the moving of the military movements going on near her frontier. The first gun fired will convulse the whole continent. War is the greatest crime against humanity, and all right-minded people deplore that it must be. If it should come to the nations of the old world America will be the storehouse from which its sinews will come—ammunition, food and clothing.

We have always favored immigration, and believe that permanent settlers from abroad should be welcomed to the State with open hearts and a cordial hand. They will when industrious, whether they bring capital or not, add to the common wealth of the community where they may cast their lot. At the same time we do not think it a wise or even a just policy to encourage an increase in the supply of labor in any particular locality beyond the demand. To import people from abroad, to do the work which those already on the ground are capable, anxious and willing to undertake. We trust that our employers in this city, will take this view of the matter, and not adopt a contrary and injurious policy. Let those already with us be first cared for, and then it will be time enough to abroad, and invite men from far and near to come in and supply all deficiencies in the labor market.

Gov. GREEN, of New Jersey, in his inaugural message treats in the subject of capital and labor from the Democratic standpoint of encouragement and protection to wage-workers. There is no natural conflict between labor and capital; there should be none between employer and employee. Capital invested in the industries of the country and the development of its resources, gives employment to labor. The employment of labor results in profit to the capital invested. The industries are never so safely prosperous as when labor is contented. Ill-paid, dissatisfied labor may bring fitful success to capital, but discontent breeds trouble and dissatisfaction at the mine, the factory, the work bench, inevitably makes itself felt in the counting room and in the market.

The encroachment of aggregated capital upon the rights of the wage-worker have led to the organization of labor as a measure of self-protection. In all earnest efforts to regain their rights by lawful methods they have the sympathy and aid of every impartial person. The question of the relative rights and responsibilities of labor and capital must be solved. It should be solved in the spirit of justice and right. All discrimination unfavorable to labor on the statute book should be removed. The demands of labor for its just compensation, the protection of the life, limb and health of the employee, the advantages of education to all, with the time and opportunity for improvement, and the enjoyment of education and home life, and all other rights, should be secured. The protection of government of the honest workman from competition with convict and imported pauper and contract labor, unjust and destructive of his proper remuneration, and from its character degrading to his manhood, should be absolutely assured. They ask measures which appeal to one's sympathy and command his approval. Among such are laws establishing a labor holiday, fixing the liability of employers for injuries caused by their negligence, laws for the security of life, limb and preservation of the health of persons employed in factories, the establishment of reasonable hours for refreshment. They ask for means for the more efficient execution of existing laws, and that the proper execution of laws framed for the protection of the wage-worker be secured by the appointment of labor men to State labor offices.

The enactment of laws tending to operate upon a portion of the people in restraint of their mutual protection is unjust, and to make the exercise of such a right, a criminal offense is indefensible. But the adjustment should be made with due regard to the rights of others. It should be undertaken in no spirit of vindictiveness. It is justice, equality, protection, that labor demands, not retaliation or invasion of the rights of others.

Labor owes it to the country, to the industrial interests, to itself, that the demands should not only be just to all, made with due regard to the legal rights of others, to be obtained by legal methods without infraction or violation of law and order, but that, when granted, the result should be accepted as final. Continual agitation of differences unsettles the business of the country and is ruinous to all its interests. It affects not only the capitalists, but the welfare of every one. Means certainly can be devised by which differences can be adjusted without frictions and without loss to the wage-worker or the employer. Strikes, with their periods of idleness and contributions on others for support, injure not only the employer, but the great body of labor. If arbitration is the solution let it be accepted; if not, let some other satisfactory plan be devised.

This is old, sound, Democratic doctrine. The Democracy has its foundations laid deep in the heart of the great masses of the American people, and their affections gather about it and cling to it because its principles are drawn from, and founded upon, the rights of man, to enjoy the utmost freedom in his industrial pursuits compatible with the existence of our free Democratic institutions. That men shall have the right to pursue all lawful means in the pursuit of happiness. The Democracy is labor's own party. The breadwinner's best friend. It knows no classes, and in its broad compass embraces all, and this is why Democratic presidents and governors see fit and proper and their bounden duty to call the attention of Congress and Legislatures in their messages to the rights, wants and interests of labor. And why it has always been at war with the grasping demands of privileged classes, who under Republican rule have been so highly favored, and so pampered until they want the whole earth to satisfy their insatiable avarice, and would recognize no rights of the laboring masses of men which they were bound to respect.

It is suggested that as the Richmond and West Point Terminal and Warehouse Company derived its name from a line of road extending from Richmond to West Point, on the York river, only a short distance, and as this company now controls some 5000 feet of railway in the South, passing through a half-dozen States it should be changed to the "Richmond, Danville & Southern Railway Company" as its charter authorized a change of name whenever it was thought proper.

Mr. George Vanderbilt, who inherited all the Staten Island estates of his father, the late William H. Vanderbilt, has expressed his willingness to donate a large tract of land at Clifton, Staten Island, to the Trustees of the Moravian Church at New Dorp, to build a large church upon. The late William H. Vanderbilt was a trustee of the church, and when he died he left it a legacy of $100,000. The trustees of the church will have to assure membership of over 150 persons before the deed will be granted.

FOR SALE A GOOD SAFE AND AN OVEN. S. H. CHERRY & SON.

Clear Complexion. How can you expect a clear complexion when the blood is full of impurities and the stomach clogged? The blood becomes impure because the liver does not act properly and work of the poison from the system, and the certain results are blotches, pimples and eruptions. Purify the blood with Simons' Liver Regulator, and regulate the liver, stomach and bowels, and the skin will become clear.

Is the Oriental salutation, knowing that good health cannot exist without a healthy liver. When the liver is torpid the bowels are sluggish and constipated, the food lies in the stomach undigested, poisoning the blood; frequent headache ensues, a feeling of lassitude, drowsiness and nervousness indicate how the who's system is deranged. Simons' Liver Regulator has been the means of restoring more people to health and happiness by giving them a healthy liver than any agency known on earth. It acts with extraordinary power and efficacy.

As a general family remedy for Dyspepsia, Torpid Liver, Constipation, etc., I hardly ever see anything else, and have never seen anything pointed in the effect produced; it seems to be almost a perfect cure of stomach and bowels. W. J. McELROY, Macon, Ga. nov 4 edwzn.
