Published weekly by J. M. PURMAN, Editor. J. D. CAMERON, Business Manager.

TUESDAY MORNING, AUG. 9 1887.

Dr. Battle, first assistant in the State Chemical Department under Dr. Dabney, is suggested as a suitable successor to that gentleman as chief of the department. We second the nomination. We favor this because he is said by competent judges to be qualified for the place. Besides his qualifications Mr. Battle is urged as a North Carolinian. We are not for a North Carolinian for a position because he is a North Carolinian, but being thoroughly qualified for a position to be filled, the fact that a person is a North Carolinian enhances our preference for him. We are for certain fitness and qualification rather than personality or location of birth. Dr. Battle is said to be eminently qualified for the succession. He is also a North Carolinian. The one should not be necessary to the other, but the two combined unquestionably should enhance his claims for election. Let him be elected.

P. S. We see that Dr. Battle has been appointed to fill the position until November.

COL. "BILL" SAUNDERS. We most heartily endorse the following from the Statesville Landmark relative to Hon. W. L. Saunders:

The Scotland Neck Democrat, in bringing out Col. W. L. Saunders for Governor next year, gives due and deserved recognition to the ability and worth of one of the most remarkable men in the State. His heart is as big as his body and intellectually he is hard to measure. It is very doubtful if we find an abler man. He exercises a larger influence upon the public policy of North Carolina and of the Democratic party than any other one man. He was the father of the constitutional convention of 1875, and all of its important acts bear his impress. No line of party policy is ever agreed on until he has been consulted and approves "Sage counsel in lumber, red hand in the foray," he is matchless in his capacity to plan, to organize. What a campaign he would set on foot and what a Governor he would make!

But how about his appearing before the people? For you should know that he is physically "helpless." Gout holds him a prisoner in a rolling chair. Living in that chair, and sleeping in his clothes half the time in winter, his great big body racked nearly all the time with pain, he still manages to do incredible work and to make the best Secretary of State we ever had. But it is the unwritten law of North Carolina that the candidates for Governor must stump the State, and how are we to get over that? The rolling chair cannot roll from Currituck to Cherokee, and its occupant could not address the people if it could. He is not a talking man, but oh! Jupiter! just give him a pen.

If the people of North Carolina want to take up a Brain and elect it Governor—a Brain which is sound in all its functions, which thinks deeply about everything and reaches accurate and just conclusions about them all; if they want to do this without seeing the body connected with it, without hearing the tongue which drips wit and wisdom in the council chamber and in the assemblage of friends, then it is Col. Saunders they are looking for. Of such fibre is he that if he were Governor, even in these trying times when there seems to be little for a Governor to do, he would give the State an administration which would be memorable in history.

A HORRIBLE CRIME.

A Father, Mother, six Children and an Aunt Murdered.

MACON, Ga., Aug. 6.—Capt. Richard F. Woolfolk, living 13 miles from Macon on what is known as the Columbus Road with his wife, six children and a visiting aunt of Mrs. Woolfolk were most brutally murdered this morning. Reporter visited the scene of the crime and found a large crowd of country people assembled around the house, which is ordinary four room house, like all country houses, with a wide hallway between the rooms. In the rear room was found the bodies of the Captain and Mrs. Woolfolk, Richard, aged 20, Pearl, a grown daughter, Charlie, aged 8, and the baby, aged 18 months. In the room opposite were the bodies of the aunt (Mrs. West) and two little girls, Rosebud and Annie. Blood and brains were scattered everywhere and in the passageway was a large pool of blood, and here also was found an axe with a short handle. A coroner's jury was empanelled and several witnesses examined, none of whom knew anything except the appearance of Thos. G. Woolfolk, son of the Captain by his first wife, at the house of a colored neighbor, at an early hour this morning, saying a murder had been committed. Also, of parties who first entered the house after the alarm was given, stating further that he went to his father's house several days ago to work for him. He slept in the first room on one bed, his two stepdaughters occupying the other. He was awakened about day break by the groans of his father in next room; also sounds of flicks. He, fearing the family would be murdered, jumped out of a window and ran to the house of Green Lockett, got him and aroused neighbors and asked them to bring help. Thinking his time might be next he kept away for half an hour, then returned to find no help had arrived, went in and found the family had been murdered and all dead. This was about the substance of his statement. The jury brought in a verdict of murder against T. G. Woolfolk. Before the verdict was announced the Sheriff succeeded in quietly removing him to the jail here. Fortunately the prisoner was removed before the danger of lynching became so great. The prisoner is cool and talks of the crime very indifferently. The mature commission of the deed is a supposed desire to obtain possession of the father's property.

A Twilight Reflection.

Night kiss—the young rose, and it bent softly to sleep. Stars and pure dew droplets hung upon its bosom and watch'd its sweet slumber. Morning came with its dancing breezes and they whispered to the young rose and it awoke joyous and smiling. Lightly it swung to and fro in all the loveliness of health and youthful innocence. Then came the bright sun god, sweeping from the east, and smote the young rose with its scorching rays and it faintly broken, it dropped to the dust in its loveliness and despair. Now the gentle breeze, which had been grooming over the sea, pushing on the home-bound, sweeping over hill and dale, by the neat cottage and still brook, turning the old mill, fanning the brow of disease and frisking with the curls of innocent child, Deserter and almost heart broken, it dropped to the dust in its loveliness and despair.
