Outside of these there are channels into which reflection might usefully be turned during the breathing spell given to thought and action.

Are intelligence, industry, integrity given to us for the sole purpose of making money? Is it the whole "duty of man" to grow rich ? to consume his life, to narrow his aims, to contract his heart and dry up his brain that he may shine as the millionaire, or at least, as the monied FOR SALE, magnate? This certainly is the drug store in the county. Will sell chesp for temper of the times; and in the absorbing ideas involved in such heart are chilled, all the high aspidestiny, all the warm impulses of the rations of the intellect are dashed down, all the refining influences of Hampton taste are contemned, and the noble, mental and moral parts of the human fabric are allied pitilessly to the service of gain.

In the quiet rest of the Sabbath, let us forget for the time our bases nature, and think if there is not something to be done outside of our selves; if there is not something to be done for others; if the broad field of human suffering cannot give us occupation; if public or private charities do not demand our contributions or our co-operation.

Or, changing the path of thought, is there not something to be done in behalf of intellectual progress, something that may widen the sphere of education, something that may en- Our Whiskies and Brandies large and liberalize the intellectual arena, something that may cultivate or satisfy the objects of taste, something that may elevate the thoughts and feelings above the attainment of wealth.

It is not pleasant to perceive, that with the increase of population, and that increase of marked intelligence, and also with the increase of wealth and its correspondent increase of Our Stock is Complete in public and private facilities and conveniences, there has not been a corresponding development of the fields to which we have referred. "The spirit of the age" has seized upon us. The demon of money making has got us by the throat, and we are in danger of being drawn Old Rye of the highest standard inextricably into the current of pure, selfish materialism. All over the country, here as eisewhere, it is a delirium, the delirium of the opium eater, full of pleasant dreams and gorgeous visions; like them, to end some day in an awaking up to a reality of the hollowness, perhaps the bitterness, of vanity.

Were we not made for nobler ends? Were not our faculties given for higher uses? Is money all that is to be gained, and wealth only trons for their past favors, and we to be respected?
