WHY MONEY IS SCARCE IN NEW YORK.

While legitimate business and trade in New York City is very good and greatly increased over last year, of money. This scarcity has created sume disturbance there. In discussing the situation and it discussing the situation and its effects the New York Commercial Advertiser says:

Where is it? We believe that it is legitimately distributed among the younger banks of the West and South. New York is no longer the sole financial storehouse for the rest of the country. The extension of the banking business during the last year has been unusually large; and it was noticed months ago that this exercised an important influence upon interior exchanges. At the present time it is the New York wholesale and jobbing trade that needs money, and the presure is therefore all upon the New York banks. But the banks are feeling the loss of deposits and capital which they used to ship to the West, and receive again later, but which are now permanently fixed in that part of the country. In a word, we are passing into a new phase of internal finance, and the machinery and are dropping their policies and sub-creaks and groans as it is turned to stituting for them policies in companies ry placed in normal connection with the general money market, the great national reservoir of canital mutual insurance Company of Virginia great national reservoir of capital would be of incalculable assistance in tiding over the difficulties of the in tiding over the difficulties of the moment. But its operation is unnatural and cumbrous, and the fear of its accumulations makes stringof panic.

The New York Herald says "There is no occasion for the semihysterical utterances of certain people who seem to have now learned for the first time that there is a stringent loan market and who are talking of a panic. A panic does not come that way, preceded by a brass band and the whole community awaiting it. They have had a protracted liquidation in Wall street. general business is on a good basis. and there is no need to fear panic; but the paucity of loanable funds does cause extreme discomfort in commercial circles. It is putting a check upon the prosperity in the country, and whatever relief the treasury can afford should be given promptly."
