

ASHEVILLE CITIZEN.

Editors: R. M. FURMAN, J. D. CAMERON. SATURDAY MORNING, NOV. 26, 1887.

Barnum's elephant Alice, burned in the late Bridgeport fire, seemed to have carried on a plan of insurance for the benefit of her owner.

The Alabama Conference of the Methodist Church, South, adopted resolutions requesting the Rev. D. C. Kelly D. D. a most distinguished divine, and missionary treasurer to the General Conference, to resign for the part he took in defence of Emma Abbott, who rose to her own defence when the theatre was denounced in a sermon delivered in a church in Nashville which she attended.

The rebuke administered to so distinguished a man as Dr. Kelly would seem to be a harsh one if it were forgotten how pronounced the opinions of the Methodist church have always been on the subject of worldly amusements. In latter days there has been much relaxation in the rigor of enforcement in these principles, observable notably in dress and personal adornment. But the fundamental principle remains unchanged.

On this subject the News and Courier says:

The policy of the Methodist church has always been recognized as antagonistic to the theatre. While it is a somewhat debated question whether theatre attendance is a matter of discipline, it is an accepted fact that the Methodist church frowns upon the theatre, and uses all of its influence to prevent its members from patronizing what is called "a worldly amusement."

The action against Dr. Kelley is taken on account of the official position that he holds in the church. It is thought that an endorsement of Miss Abbott's course by an official member of the church is too near to an endorsement by the church. The resolutions are not in anywise intended as a reflection upon the character of Dr. Kelley, who is recognized all over the South as a Christian gentleman of spotless character. The same brevity that characterized his action as a Confederate colonel is clearly seen in his conduct as a minister of the Gospel. He says exactly what he thinks, and in this case he thinks very differently from the church of which he is an officer.

We had hoped, with the execution of the Chicago Anarchists to have done with an offensive subject. But Herr Most has revived it speedily, and in a way that has brought the forces of the law into very prompt action. He has tried again to demonstrate the idea that liberty consists in license; whereas experience has just shown the country that the reverse is the case. The principle enunciated by many that a man is to be punished for his deeds and not for his words, is not universally a sound one. Words instigate to violence as directly and effectually as the application of a spark to the explosion of a magazine. Herr Most is not innocent, he is not excusable when he uses the following inflammatory language:

"Every person concerned in that tragedy," the hanging of the Chicago Anarchists, "from the beginning to the end is marked for extinction. The revolution is at hand." [A voice here cried "why not begin tonight?"] "Again I say, arm yourselves for revolution. Your arm is the bomb; it is stronger than the Gatling gun or other weapons. It kills fifty at once. Grinnell shall be first, then comes Gary, the Judges of the Supreme Court of Illinois, and the Judges of the U. S. Supreme Court. And, let not Oglesby think he will escape because he commuted two of them."

The individual who sets a vicious dog upon another, and "sics" him on to attack, certainly does not do the biting, but as certainly he will be held responsible for the injury done. Let Most be well punished for the incitement he gives to revenge and violence. If his voice and those like him, were not heard in stirring up the bad passions of those quite ready to obey when the way is pointed out peace and content would prevail.

THE FRENCH CRISIS;

For crisis it is when the constitutional head of a government yields to pressure applied by his coadjutors, and abdicates the functions imposed upon him by his oaths of office. It strikes an American with amazement to see a Republican government subjected to the caprices of an individual, and transferred from hand to hand with the facility proper to a debating society. We regard the responsibilities as onerous, possibly perilous; but once assumed, there is no throwing them off by voluntary action. The people or their representatives take upon themselves to decide when their chief is incompetent or unfit to hold the reins of power.

Mr. Grevy consents to resign, and in doing so has committed France to all the dangers attendant upon a succession to be contended for by violently antagonistic factions. It is no peaceable transfer such as attends the change of administration in Great Britain. We can offer no parallel; for with us the change only follows a general election, or by virtue of provision made to meet the casualties of death or sudden mental disability, or the results of removal by the machinery of law.

In France, by the resignation of Mr. Grevy, the government becomes the subject, at once, of a contest, almost certainly of a conflict, between the radicals, the royalists and the conservatives; between the advocates of adverse opinion; between those who contend for a government by the mob and one shaped by the forces of law; between the liberties of a republic and the rigor of a monarchy; perhaps more than all, between those who cling to the counsels of peace and those who burn for war and revenge on Germany.

The resignation therefore of the head of the French government opens up many hazardous contingencies, war within, or war without; perhaps both; for France may remember that, in her first revolution, amid the fiercest struggles within her own borders against the yet unsubdued principles of royalty, she carried her arms abroad and won fame and conquest on foreign soil.

The times seem fit for the unloosing of the elements of French strife. The tranquility, or rather the abstinence from bloodshed, which has marked the past few years of internal French history, is abnormal. The restraint put upon the turbulent element has been borne with impatience, and will be thrown off at the first opportunity; and that opportunity seems now to be offered.

Mr. CLEVELAND'S ADVICE.—Finally, a blushing groom along. He wore a large boutonniere in the buttonhole of his coat, and she had a whole flower garden in her corsage.

"I want to thank you for the commission you sent me the other day," said the bridegroom.

"Yes," said the President.

"I immediately followed your example and got married," continued the new appointee, "and this is my wife," he said, as he presented his blushing and pretty bride.

"That's right," said Cleveland, smiling all over. "Now see that you behave yourself," added, giving a sort of knowing look at the happy couple. The two blushed and smiled and laughed, and both made another grab at the President's hand, shook it simultaneously, and then passed on happy as turtle doves.—Baltimore American.

STATE NEWS.

The Greensboro correspondent of the News-Observer says: President Crowell, of Trinity College, lectured at the Methodist church in this city on Sunday last, after which subscriptions were taken up for the endowment fund of that institution. Mr. J. A. Odell donated $1,000 to the fund. Several donations of $100 were made and several of $50. Prof. Crowell made a very favorable impression during his visit.

The Sylva Herald says: If anyone want some good sport at hunting, he can find it in the upper end of this county. Some two weeks ago a party made up of the Reeses and others in the Cane fork region went out after some bear fun—and found it. In one week, on the headwaters of the Pigeon, on the line between Jackson and Haywood counties, they killed twelve bears, and went after the thirteenth, with fair prospects of success. A good shipment was that made Hall, Smith & Co., of 152 bushels chestnuts, yesterday, to G. E. Ambrose, Detroit, Michigan. Their weight was nearly 7,000 lbs., and the advanced freight amounted to $78.95.

The Charlotte Chronicle of the 24th says: A very destructive fire occurred in Hickory yesterday, resulting in a loss of ten thousand dollars. The fire originated at one o'clock in the afternoon, but in what building, or from what cause, we have been unable to learn. The flames spread rapidly and before their progress could be checked, the Central Hotel, Belmont Hotel, two residences and two stores were destroyed.

The Central Hotel was occupied by Mr. W. H. Chandler, who lost nearly all his furniture. The Belmont Hotel was occupied by Fields Bros., of Charlotte and Hickory, and the two dwelling houses were owned by Mr. E. Marshall. We could not learn who owned the two stores that were destroyed. The loss is partially covered by insurance.

A True Statement. Dr. Hart's Family Medicines are acknowledged, where known, to be the most reliable and trustworthy remedies in the market. His Amblyopia Discovery, for bilious complaints, in digestion, &c., can not be surpassed, and who does not know of cures performed by the use of Hart's Great Relief? The Winslow Worm Candy and Vermifuge, Dr. Hart's Pills, and, in fact, all of the celebrated Doctors' remedies, are equally valuable.

Doctors' Bills.

Nearly all diseases originate from inaction of the liver, and this especially the case with chills and fever, intermittent fevers, and malarial diseases. To save doctors' bills and ward off disease take Simmons Liver Regulator, an medicine that increases in popularity each year, and has become the most popular and best endorsed medicine in the market for the cure of liver or bowel diseases. —Telegraph, Dubuque, Iowa.

Up to a few weeks ago I considered myself the champion Dyspeptic of America. During the years that I have been afflicted I have tried almost everything claimed to be a specific for Dyspepsia in the hope of finding something that would afford permanent relief. I had about made up my mind to abandon all medicines when I noticed an endorsement of Simmons Liver Regulator by a prominent Georgian, a jurist whom I knew, and concluded to try its effects in my case. I have used but two bottles, and am satisfied that I have struck the right thing at last. It felt its beneficial effects almost immediately. Unlike all other preparations of a similar kind, no special instructions are required as to what one shall or shall not eat. This fact alone ought to commend it to all troubled with Dyspepsia.
